NEW YORK (UPI) — An Eastern Airlines 727 trijet attempting to land in a rainstorm at the end of a nonstop flight from New Orleans crashed short of the runway at Kennedy International airport Tuesday, killing 109 of the 123 persons aboard.

Twelve of the 14 survivors were listed in critical condition in local hospitals, suffering from flash burns, broken bones, and other injuries. Two persons who lived through the flaming crash died hours later.

A temporary morgue was set up at the airport. Some of the dead were taken to area hospitals, where stretchers were lined up outside emergency rooms.

A survivor of the crash said that as the plane approached the airport—20 minutes behind schedule—one of its wings dipped lower than the other as the craft skirted over a heavily populated area of the borough of Queens. He said he was knocked unconscious by an explosion and remembered nothing until he came to among the ruins.

"I saw this big flash of fire like the atomic bomb going off," said Moe Friedman, an airport employee who was driving along Rockaway Boulevard at 4:06 p.m. EDT, the time of the crash. The plane—carrying among the other survivors 19 Norwegian sailors on the first leg of a homeward vacation flight—was due to land at Kennedy 21 minutes earlier.

"The flames went up in the air about 500 to 600 feet," Friedman said. That is the height of a 60-story skyscraper. "She went right across the highway. The rain was coming down pretty heavy."

One witness said the jetliner smashed into vehicles as it ripped across Rockaway Boulevard. Another witness said he saw lightning strike the plane. There was no official confirmation of either report.

A man braked his panel truck on the rain-slick roadway to escape the plane as it went by. He then rushed into a diner.

"He was crying and said he saw the tail go down first," said a waitress at the cafe. "He said he skidded and made a U-turn and saw the plane take several cars with it as it crashed."

Police said the ground was littered with human limbs, luggage and food and eating utensils from the plane's two galleys. Police set up their temporary morgue under a yellow tarpaulin tent nearby. It was filled with bodies—on sheet-covered stretchers, in "body bags" and in "body boxes."

Frank Borman, the former astronaut who now is president of Eastern Air Lines, flew to New York from Boston to inspect the scene.

"In my career in aviation, which spans 32 years, I've seen a lot of accidents," Borman said. "This plane was in several pieces. It was a real bad crash."

The crash occurred at on the northeastern fringe of the giant airport, about 100 yards short of runway 22-left. A police spokesman said the plane "hit a whole load of airport lightposts" as it smashed to the ground. The nose of the plane came to rest against a dirt dune covered with weeds.

A section of the landing gear was rammed up against one of the light towers—used by pilots to guide them toward the runway. They were uprooted and overturned by the impact. The rest of the airliner was reduced to rubble as it slid across the mucky ground of a swampy field.

As the 727, Flight 66 from New Orleans, was loaded for takeoff from the Louisiana city on the Mississippi River, a late-arriving passenger rushed up. Eastern officials reopened the closed passenger door and allowed the unidentified passenger to board the fatal flight.

"Two of the survivors apparently walked away from accident," Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

The National Transportation Safety Board said rescue workers could not get close to the wreckage for an hour after the crash because of the flames and intense heat. After that, they moved in quickly to remove the dead and injured.

Motorists along Rockaway Boulevard abandoned their cars after the crash, creating a large traffic jam for miles around the airport. Rescue teams had to be airlifted to the wreckage.

Thirteen survivors were at Jamaica Hospital. One victim died there during the evening. Two survivors were at Long Island Jewish Hospital.

The airport was closed for one hour and 48 minutes because of the crash.

If the jetliner had crashed earlier on its approach, it could have been a worse disaster.

As the plane approached Kennedy Airport, it passed over the Belmont race track, the heavy traffic of the Cross Island Parkway and over an area of Long Island densely populated with homes and apartments.

Tocks Dam 'better buy' than other alternatives

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter
WEST TRENTON, N.J. — The Tocks Island Dam is a better buy than any of its alternatives, according to a summary of the federally-mandated restudy released Tuesday.

(Related stories, page 11)

The summary, a condensed version of the 3,000-page restudy completed by a New York City-based consulting firm, states Tocks Island would give the federal government a better return for its dollars invested, but would cause more harm to the environment than any of its alternatives.

Final judgment on the future of the proposed $400 million project will rest with Congress later this summer.

Making a decision will not be easy, according to Raymond Tillman, project director for URS-Madigan and Praeger and Conklin and Rossant.

"It will depend on whether or not Congress takes an environmentalist's or an economist's point of view," Tillman said.

During their seven months of research on the project, consultants found that technically possible alternatives do exist, although costs, benefits and impacts vary widely.

The alternatives could be combined to help meet the Delaware River Basin's needs for recreation, water supply, electrical power and flood control.

Of the four proposals, only Tocks Dam would give the government a profit, yielding an estimated $16 million a year more than it costs. The other alternatives would lose $25 million, $17 million and $1 million per year respectively.

In making comparisons, consultants cautioned they could only include a small portion of the total overall costs and benefits of the project. However, the study states the comparisons are "roughly indicative of the degree of efficiency" of which money is used.

Main reason

The main reason for Tocks Island being more financially feasible than its alternatives is that it is a multi-purpose project, meeting all needs with one body of water, according to consultants.

The restudy outlined three possible alternatives to the controversial dam across the Delaware north of Shawnee-on-Delaware. Tillman said they were included for comparison's sake only, and could be intertwined into more viable alternatives.

They included:

— Construction of a dry dam at the Tocks Island site, providing downriver protection during floods. Other needs would be met through the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWGNRA), state parks substituting other electrical plants for pumped storage and taking measures to protect Philadelphia and Camden, N.J.'s water systems from salt pollution.

— An alternative plan calling for damming tributaries for water supply and flood protection, flood plain zoning, opening of reservoirs now closed to recreation and continuation of the DWGNRA.

— A third program, with other power plants providing electricity to make up for the loss of pumped storage, flood plain zoning and continuation of DWGNRA.

The three alternatives would meet the river basin's needs in periods of high, medium and low economic growth, respectively.

Less dollar return

However, while the three alternatives would do less harm to nature, they would provide less of a dollar return, according to the study.

Tillman would not take a position on building the dam. He said a series of graphs prepared by the consultant show the advantages and disadvantages of each of the alternatives.

For example, Tocks dam was the only alternative that would return more money to the government than it cost to build.

On the other hand, the other alternatives showed less impacts on water quality, wildlife and fish habitats and public acceptance than Tocks.

Tocks Island has been turned into an object far greater than its actual role and probable effect on regional development, according to the summary.

It also stated that certain areas once thought to be of major importance, notably potential salt pollution and flood protection, could be more effectively prevented through other methods of control.

The report stressed, however, that Tocks would easily help meet water supply needs.

Ford challenges Congress again

Housing bill vetoed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, tossing another challenge at the Democratic-controlled Congress, Tuesday vetoed a $1.35 billion bill designed to make more housing available to middle-income Americans and to create more jobs.

At the same time, the President took action of his own in the housing field, releasing $2 billion in mortgage purchase authority for the Government National Mortgage Association which subsidizes interest rates in home-buying.

Announcing his latest veto to reporters in the White House briefing room, the President said the measure sent him by Congress would add $1 billion to the national debt, while the net cost of his action would be only $60 million.

Speaker Carl Albert tentatively scheduled a House vote today on a Democratic effort to overrule the President's decision, but acknowledged it "cannot be overridden." House Republican Leader John Rhodes agreed.

The House passed the bill June 5 on a 253-155 vote, short of the two-thirds margin required to override the veto. It was the President's 33rd veto since taking office, and his sixth this year—all six of which have stood.

The legislation called for providing buyers of new or existing homes a subsidized 7 per cent mortgage; or a 6 per cent mortgage rising to the going market rate in six years; or a $1,000 cash grant to help with the down payment. It also would have offered loans of $250 a month for 24 months for unemployed homeowners who had received foreclosure notices.

Democratic sponsors said the bill would have led to construction of 400,000 housing units and creation of 800,000 jobs. Coupled with the the $5.3 billion bill to create 900,000 public service jobs, also vetoed by Ford, the housing measure was one of two main ones drafted by congressional Democrats to boost the economy.

Bounced back to House

Senate passes budget for state

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Senate Tuesday night approved its version of the state budget for fiscal 1975-76 and sent the document back to the House for final approval.

The bill—which funds most of state government spending—totals nearly $4.5 billion. The bill passed 27-22 after Senate Democrats defeated 16 attempts to amend the measure.

In this version of the budget, Senate Democrats cut $27 million from the operating budgets for all state departments and $5 million from the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority.

It used the money "saved" by the cuts to provide a $31 million package of statewide health and welfare aid aimed at helping Allegheny County, which would get about $13 million.

The House was scheduled to meet this week to decide if it wants to approve the changes made by the Senate. House leaders reportedly oppose the freeze put on government operating budgets and will try to send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee for a compromise.

The current fiscal year ends on June 30. Unless a budget is signed into law by the next day, the state will lose the power to spend the money in its treasury.

During the two hours of debate on the budget, the Senate twice defeated an attempt by Sen. Louis Hill, D-Philadelphia, to restore $350,000 cut from the Justice Department budget that would have been used to fund Philadelphia's special prosecutor.

The prosecutor is investigating police and political corruption in Philadelphia, and is opposed by Sen. Henry Cianfrani, D-Philadelphia, head of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Strike by state employees would hurt jobless, needy

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — A strike by state employees in support of 30 per cent union wage hike demands could mean a crisis for 390,000 persons collecting unemployment and another 600,000 on welfare.

Officials at the Labor and Industry and Public Welfare departments worked throughout Tuesday on contingency plans for keeping computerized checks flowing to nearly one million jobless and needy if the biggest state employees' union calls a strike.

If a strike were to occur, it would probably take place about July.

Negotiations scheduled June 26-27 between state officials and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees were canceled and rescheduled for June 29.

An AFSCME spokesman said he could not comment on whether a strike vote would be taken or how one might be taken to support wage reopening demands on an agreement running to mid-1976.

John Clark, executive director for the Bureau of Employment Security, said 1,977 of BES' 5,100 employees are members of AFSCME.

"And many are involved in the data processing operation—the key to our unemployment compensation check payments that are now running close to $6 million a day," Clark said.

"We now have three shifts a day working six, sometimes seven days a week getting out checks to qualified claimants."

Plot to murder Castro involved underworld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Roselli, a reputed underworld figure from the days of Al Capone, supplied numerous details to Senate investigators Tuesday of his connection with the CIA and an alleged 1961 plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Roselli, accompanied by two attorneys, was taken to a tight-security chamber under the dome of the Capitol to give the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence chronological details and names of U.S. government personnel he said were involved in the plot.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the panel, told reporters after three hours of testimony that Roselli's account did not depart from, or repudiate, press accounts of the plot and provided "much greater detail."

But Church, who repeated that the committee has hard evidence of CIA assassination plots and attempts in the past, refused to discuss the substance of Roselli's testimony. He said that would violate the committee's exceptionally strict secrecy rules.

When a Dutch correspondent, just arrived from Holland to cover the investigation, asked how a U.S. government agency could develop an assassination plot, Church replied wryly: "The watchdog committees of Congress were not watching the dog!"

"I find it reprehensible that any agency of the government of the United States should ever have engaged in an assassination attempt against the leader of a country with which we had peaceful relations."

House passes money bill for Rte. 209 relocations

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The House Tuesday night passed a $9 billion public works bill carrying $4.6 million to begin relocation of Rte. 209 in the coming fiscal year. The appropriations measure now goes to the Senate.

The bill specifically earmarks the money for land acquisition and construction of a new Rte. 209. The appropriations committee, in its report to the House, said that none of the funds could be used for any aspect of the Tocks Island Dam project.

The funds in the bill include $2.5 million for the fiscal year, which begins July 1, and another $2.1 million for the three-month transition period when the government shifts to a new fiscal year in Oct. 1976.

The federal funds affect about 23 of the 28 miles of Rte. 209, which run either through the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area or the land that would be submerged if the dam were built.

The money was added to the bill at the request of Rep. Joseph M. McDade (R-Scranton).

Opponents gather data to kill Pocono Arts Center

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — For Gov. Milton J. Shapp, the unveiling of the new work of art was a dream come true—a tribute to the genius of the late architect Louis I. Kahn.

The Pocono Arts Center would be a cultural hub in the mountains—a site for artists, actors and musicians that would make a name for Pennsylvania in the world of culture.

The model was unveiled last week at a gala preview that included comments from Shapp, Kahn's widow and music performed by a string quartet.

But even before the cookies and punch were gone, opponents were gathering details that could bring death to the dream before construction begins.

They claim it will cost much more than the $37 million estimated by Shapp, that most of the new tax revenue will go to the federal government and that few Pennsylvanians will use the area.

The center would include an open air theater, a stage house, and two small theaters—all located on about 700 acres of land in the Pocono Mountains 80 miles north of Philadelphia.

It would be in the Lehigh Gorge State Park in Carbon County—a wilderness area the state bought to protect from developers, who already own giant sections of land in the mountains.

Shapp is using a study prepared by Arthur D. Little, Inc. to justify construction, claiming it would bring millions of dollars in jobs and new taxes to Pennsylvania.

Opponents skeptical

From the first day the plan was announced two years ago, opponents have been skeptical of Shapp's motives and methods. One question involves land acquisition.

"We're really puzzled about the history of land acquisition in this case," said Auditor General Robert P. Casey.

He claimed that Shapp's aides said the land was being purchased to save it from developers, when in reality it was to get a good site for the center.

Casey also said:

—The governor's estimate of $37 million was deceptive. If 20-year bonds are sold to finance construction, Casey said the cost would be more than $70 million.

—Shapp's estimate does not include the cost for highway construction, which the auditor general estimated would be about $30 million.

—The Little study notes that taxpayers will have to pick up $2.3 million in deficits annually to keep the center running, and that estimate was made in 1973.

—Some $12.2 million of the $16.4 million in new taxes the center will create will go to the federal government.

"The primary beneficiaries won't even be Pennsylvanians," he said, noting the Little study reported that only 30 per cent of the visitors to the Poconos in the 1960's were from Pennsylvania.

Despite Casey's objections, there is little he can do to stop the Arts Center. That is not true of Sen. Thomas M. Nolan, D-Allegheny, the majority leader who doesn't like Shapp's idea.

Won't happen
Before construction can begin, the project must be approved by the House and the Senate. Nolan said that won't happen.

"We just don't think an arts center in the Poconos is going to benefit the majority of the people of Pennsylvania," Nolan said.

"I can't understand why the governor is asking for this kind of money in his budget when he can't find the cash to fund vital programs. There is no way there will be a tradeoff."

Nolan said the bill will never leave the Senate State Government Committee, where he used his position as chairman to block the arts center proposal in 1973.

Although Shapp said he has local support for the project, it clearly will not come from sportsmen.

"That Lehigh River right now is a scenic wonderland and we don't think that the state should destroy that space," said James Price, vice president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen.

"We are constantly looking for more open space. It's going to bring thousands of people into a wilderness area and I urge sportsmen to work to defeat it."

House panel approves bill to permit gas rationing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Commerce Committee approved by a wide margin Tuesday an energy conservation bill that would allow gasoline rationing, require auto fuel efficiency and force down domestic oil prices.

"It is eminently vetoable," Rep. Samuel L. Devine, R-Ohio, told UPI.

"It is basically a good bill," said its chief author, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich. "A veto? That's a possibility. We will be talking about possible compromises."

Devine said the White House had made clear its objection to the oil pricing provision and the authority for federal purchase of foreign oil.

In a final, quick debate under a strict time limitation, the committee rejected a substitute bill by Republicans who wanted price controls on oil lifted in stairstep fashion, with some control over windfall profits.

The committee operated most of Tuesday under a limit of two minutes per amendment, including some that ran several pages.

"Here we are with one minute of debate (to each side). What are we doing? It is just too much," Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., complained.

The committee rejected attempts to make the auto fuel efficiency standards tougher. It also approved a new office to audit oil company dealings.

The bill is the non-tax companion to the energy tax bill the House has approved.

The bill as drafted in subcommittee would hold car manufacturers to certain gasoline mileage starting with an average of 18.5 miles per gallon with the 1978 models. The standard would go up each year. Manufacturers could be fined $50 for each mile-per-gallon their fleet average fell short.

The committee changed the provision so that auto makers with some models made abroad could not count those in the mileage. That change made the bill conform with what the House itself voted earlier this month.

The Commerce Committee bill has one change—if exhaust standards are made so tough that they start threatening gas mileage, there would be one-mile-per-gallon leeway in the fuel standards.

The committee turned down an attempt by Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., to add fuel standards for individual cars to the fleet average standards. The committee turned him down on that and another amendment that would have doubled the fine.

Pa. health care bill amended

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Senate Democrats used their majority in the Health and Welfare Committee Tuesday to amend the Shapp administration's proposed comprehensive health care bill and send it to the floor for consideration.

The bill would give state government power to regulate hospital rates and would establish a health advocate's office to represent consumers in complaints against hospitals.

The amendments were backed by the administration. The most important change gives power over the health delivery system to the secretary of health. A special commission had the power in the earlier version of the bill.

Sen. W. Louis Coppersmith, D-Cambrian chairman of the committee, said he wanted the bill out of committee so the public and opponents can review it. It was approved 10-6. He doesn't expect action in the full Senate before mid-July.

"There are certain fundamental differences over this bill that we cannot resolve in committee," Coppersmith said. "I think it's time we get it out on the floor."

According to Coppersmith, there are the two areas of controversy in the legislation—provisions for rate control and the proposal to set up a health advocate's office.

And most of the opposition to those sections comes from the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania, which has conducted a public relations campaign and mobilized hospital staffs against the bill.

Sen. Richard Snyder, R-Lancaster, led the fight against the administration proposal in committee.

But Coppersmith, voting members of the committee who were absent, easily defeated Snyder's proposals.

Ivy Baker Priest, 69, loses lengthy bout with cancer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Ivy Baker Priest, the second woman Treasurer of the United States and the first woman elected to a statewide office in California, was mourned Tuesday as "proof that integrity and decency in government do exist."

Mrs. Priest, a longtime Republican party stalwart who helped Dwight Eisenhower win the 1952 GOP nomination for President, died Monday night at the age of 69. Several members of her family were at her bedside at St. John's Hospital when she succumbed after a lengthy bout with cancer.

Memorial services will be held Thursday morning at the Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ, Westwood Ward Chapel, in West Los Angeles. She will be buried at Wasatch Lawn Memorial Park in Salt Lake City on Saturday.

"Those of us who knew her well will miss her warm and friendly good cheer, and most certainly her eternal optimism and dedication to duty," said Ronald Reagan, who served as governor of California during Mrs. Priest's two terms as state treasurer.

Mrs. Priest got her start as a Republican party worker as a child in Bingham, Utah, where she baby-sat and ran errands for GOP voters at election time.

She was defeated in her first try for office in 1934, when she lost a bid for the Utah House of Representatives, and she lost again in 1950 when she ran for a Utah seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. But she served as a Republican national committeewoman from Utah from 1944 to 1952.

Mrs. Priest had charge of the Women's Division at the 1952 GOP convention and led the "Young Turk" movement that campaigned for General Eisenhower when he was still an unannounced presidential candidate.

She said at the time, "Women are going to the polls this year because, first of all, they want peace, and second, they want a change for the better."

Shortly after he won the election Eisenhower named Mrs. Priest as U.S. treasurer, and her signature appeared on all American currency issued during Eisenhower's two terms.

She once remarked, "I think I can safely say that I have handled more money than any woman in the history of the world."

Mrs. Priest dropped out of school at the University of Utah when her father, a miner, became ill so she could help support her family. But she received several honorary degrees later in life, including a doctor of humane letters from Elmira College in New York, the oldest women's college in the nation.

She was married twice. Her first husband, Roy Priest, a furniture dealer, died in 1959. She later married Sidney Stevens, a Beverly Hills, Calif., realtor, but he died in 1972.

What's news

Goddard confirmed

HARRISBURG — The Senate Tuesday unanimously confirmed Maurice K. Goddard as secretary of the Department of Environmental Resources. The vote on Goddard's confirmation had been held up by Sen. Edwin Holl, R-Montgomery, who said DER was not charging adequate rent for houses on land condemned for Evansburg State Park dam in Holl's district. But Holl said Tuesday Goddard has agreed to re-evaluate the rental charges to reflect the houses' fair market value so that they can be maintained if the dam is never built. Holl held up Goddard's confirmation four years ago in an effort to convince Goddard to abandon plans for the dam.

Chrysler starts new rebate plan

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp., the pioneer in the rebate game, announced its most ambitious discount program Tuesday—a $200 to $300 cash back deal lasting to Nov. 30 on most of its 1975 cars and trucks.

The new rebate starts Friday across the country.

Chrysler announced the start of its new program on the same day it reported its new car sales for the mid-June fell 28 per cent from the same period last year.

General Motors and Ford Motor Co., the two larger members of the nation's Big Three automakers, said they do not plan to follow Chrysler's lead.

"Rebates have worked for us this year," a company official said when asked why Chrysler was expanding its rebate game so close to the end of the current model year.

Chrysler introduced the rebate idea in January and other carmakers followed. But GM, Ford and American Motors Corp. dropped the rebates in March.

Chrysler dropped the rebates in April, but resumed them in a limited way when new car sales plunged 43 per cent from the previous April.

This time, Chrysler said, only the hot-selling Cordoba, Charger SE and Colt models are exempt from the rebate program.

Also this time, there are certain strings attached for dealers. They must pay $100 of the rebate and they must buy a certain number of cars from Chrysler to take part in the rebate operation.

IRS tightens watch on election aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has established a tight working liaison with two regulatory agencies to broaden the investigation of corporations implicated in illegal campaign contributions and unsubstantiated payments to foreign officials.

The IRS has conducted continuous audits of the nation's leading corporations for years, but the recent disclosure generated by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board has resulted in new emphasis on payments for political purposes.

"We are now meeting on a regular basis with the SEC and the CAB to compare our findings with theirs," an IRS spokesman said Tuesday. The regulatory agencies and the IRS had previously worked together on an infrequent basis.

American officials said, meanwhile, that the June 30 deadline for termination of USAID was fast approaching with the turnover process at a standstill.

The officials said that government officials responsible for dealing with the Americans on the matter were unable to act, apparently because the government is at a virtual standstill with the continued absence of the senior Pathet Lao representative in the government, Deputy Prime Minister Phoumi.

Phoumi departed more than two weeks ago for the Pathet Lao's jungle headquarters, where diplomatic sources say a meeting of the Pathet Lao central committee is being held.

Beef prices set mark

WASHINGTON — Retail beef prices have broken through to a new record this month, but an expected increase in supply will probably force a new decline in prices beginning after mid-July, an Agriculture Department specialist said Tuesday. Economist George Hoffman said average retail prices for all cuts of choice grade beef hit a new peak of $1.54 a pound for the week ending June 7 after averaging $1.48 for the month of May. The June 7 price broke a $1.53 weekly record set during February, 1974, when a combination of factors including withholding of cattle by some farmers helped drive the price average for the entire month to $1.50 a pound. That figure, which still stands as a monthly record, will probably be eclipsed when June figures are complete.

Troops leave U.S. compound

Laotians end harassment

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Communist authorities withdrew their armed guards from American diplomatic homes but U.S. officials said Tuesday no progress was being made in turning U.S. aid mission property over to the Laotian government with a June 30 deadline approaching.

About 20 green-uniformed Pathet Lao troops who have been posted since Friday at a residential compound occupied by American Charge d'Affaires Christian Chapman and most of the remaining U.S. officials in Laos were withdrawn late Monday night.

The soldiers departed after protracted negotiations between Chapman, and Pathet Lao officials from the foreign ministry.

The Pathet Lao contended the guards were placed around the compound in the mistaken belief it was property of the U.S. Agency for International Development mission that is being taken over by the Pathet Lao-dominated coalition government.

American sources here regarded it as another example of harassment of U.S. officials

Wiretap figures released

WASHINGTON — The federal government in the past six years conducted 806 electronic surveillances in national security cases not requiring court warrants, Attorney General Edward H. Levi disclosed Tuesday. It was the government's first disclosure of such statistics, and came in response to a request by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who made the figures public. Levi's report said there were 656 telephone taps and 150 microphone buggings in "warrantless" national security surveillances for the years 1969 through 1974.

House sets debt ceiling

WASHINGTON — The House, after less than a half hour of debate, Tuesday passed a $46 billion increase in the national debt ceiling. The vote was 223 to 196. The new $577 billion ceiling would be effective through Nov. 15. The bill now goes to the Senate with Congress facing a June 30 deadline for expiration of the current $531 billion ceiling. The House, in a bitter party-line fight, last week defeated an effort to increase the ceiling to $616.1 billion through June 30, 1976. Unlike that acrimonious debate, however, Tuesday's brief debate was subdued and distinctly non-political.

Movie crew provides scandal

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (UPI) — The "Jaws" shark and the people who made the gory and controversial film have left Martha's Vineyard, but a mini-scandal remains.

Jesse Oliver was fired as police chief of this coastal resort community for allegedly taking kickbacks during the filming and improperly charging the town with some expenses in the use of his private car.

Oliver said he has hired lawyer James J. Gillis Jr. "to exhaust all available remedies" to win reinstatement.

Oliver said he was suspended for 90 days Friday by the town's board of selectmen. When the suspension period ends, he is to be returned to work as the town's fourth patrolman.

The selectmen have made no public announcement about the incident.

Oliver, in a written statement, denied the allegations. He said the suspension and demotion were "in no way commensurate with the nature of the alleged misconduct."

Three persons indicted in record firm fraud case

NEW YORK (UPI) — Clive J. Davis, former president of Columbia Records, was indicted Tuesday on charges of evading $45,000 in federal income taxes for the years 1970 through 1972.

In a related development, a former CBS Inc., employee, David Wynshaw, and co-defendant Pasquale Falconio, were indicted on charges of conspiracy and mail fraud in a scheme to defraud CBS of $75,000.

Davis, who received a salary of $690,000 for the three-year period, allegedly failed to report on his tax returns other goods and services worth $90,000 he received from CBS Inc., the parent company.

These benefits, the indictment said, included $15,000 worth of personal travel accommodations and vacations, $52,000 in payments for personal apartment renovations, a $17,000 bar mitzvah reception, a $4,000 car and a $900 wrist watch.

Davis, 43, was scheduled for arraignment in Manhattan Federal Court on July 7. If convicted, he faces penalties of up to five years in prison and fines of up to $30,000.

The indictment of Wynshaw and Falconio alleged the use of sham companies set up by Falconio—including Del-Tone Trucking of North Bergen, N.J., and Limousine Service of Fort Lee, N.J.

NOTICE

To The Customers Of Stroudsburg
Municipal Authority
In Stroudsburg And Stroud Township:

Please take notice that water rates will be increased by approximately 15% effective July 1, 1975. The increase in the standard 4-fixture residence rate will be $5.00 per year, or about 1.37 cents per day. Your bill may vary slightly from this rate depending on use of additional fixtures.

This increase in rates is the first since January 1, 1969 and is made necessary because of increases in labor, electric power costs for pumping water and the cost of water treatment materials. Also, the Authority has just completed installation of an emergency power generator at the Filter Plant, at a cost of $39,000, to insure a continuation of water service in case of a power failure. Many other capital improvements have been made over the past several years to improve the water service.

The Board of the Authority regrets this increase in rate but can see no other alternative to meet increasing costs of operation and the mandated requirements of the Trust Indenture securing Water Revenue Bonds covering the interest and principal payments on Bond issues.

Only people can fight crime

U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi makes a very good point about Americans' "strange" tolerance of crime and his feeling that such an attitude must change before inroads can be made in the spiraling crime rate.

What it amounts to is a return to a previous attitude on the part of people. It does not mean a return to the vigilante days of the old West.

We are seeing that phenomenon now, in mostly western states. The Vigilante Committee of 10,000 (not necessarily the measure of its membership) is active in Idaho, California and the Dakotas. Its avowed purpose is to fight fire with fire, but as with all such organizations, all you wind up with is a further denigration of the law as people turn from it instead of to it.

In part, it's the law's own fault. Too many judges are reluctant to hand out stiff jail sentences, in many cases because the nation's penal system can't handle the load. Too often justice moves slowly and removes the threat of punishment as a real deterrent to crime.

But the public's indifference to crime, until it strikes the individuals, is a real problem. Law enforcement officers are hailing such "novel" approaches as citizens' patrols, where people keep an eye on their own neighborhoods but work with the police, not apart from them.

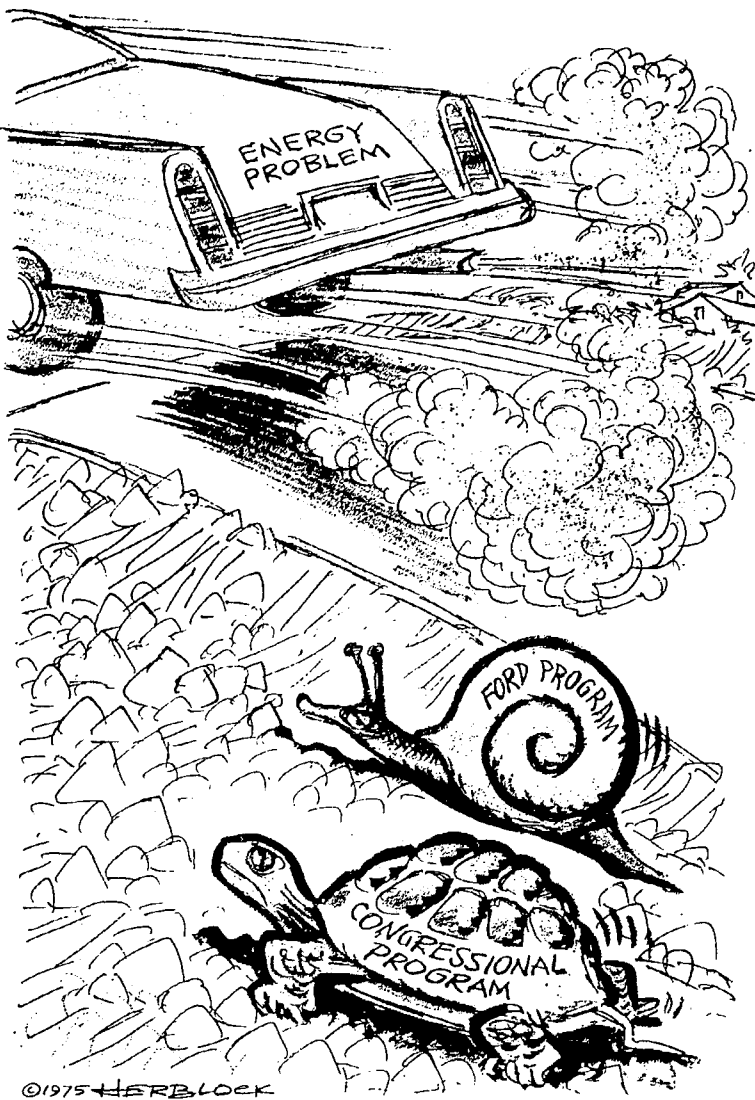

That is not a novel approach. It just hasn't been heard from in recent years, and maybe that provides a clue on what might be done to deal with the crime rate.

In our youth, every adult was an extension of the law in our neighborhood. Nothing went on that they didn't know about, and if someone went astray, you can bet the police would be notified within minutes. If the infraction wasn't that serious, the person himself would be reproached by his peers. And if the perpetrator was a child, his parents would know all about the incident in no time — and they seldom failed to apply strenuous corrective measures.

Since the government is fond of studies anyway, it might look at that "brother's-keeper" attitude and when it ceased to exist. Then by studying the societal changes of that time, it might be possible to pinpoint one or several causes for that attitudinal change and a hint of how to reverse it.

There are statistics to prove that when a neighborhood organizes itself to keep an eye on things, the crime rate there drops dramatically. When criminals (or potential criminals) realize that every suspicious move will be watched and reported, they go elsewhere.

There's also the matter of peer group pressure. When people let malefactors know they despise them and their actions, it makes for a powerful disincentive. Atty. Gen. Levi is absolutely right: People's attitude toward crime and criminals must change, we must stop glorifying crooks of all sorts — white collar crime as well as more violent acts — if we are to reverse the alarming crime spiral.

'Yankee, stay here'

WASHINGTON — It is a new and welcome change for Americans to see signs going up in the western Pacific reading, in effect: "Yankee, stay here!"

That is the message which the Northern Mariana Islands have just sent to the Congress of the United States.

The 13,000 people of the Marianas have been under the administration of the United States as a trust territory granted by the United Nations at the end of World War II. They have now decided that they want more of it, not less. They don't want political separation from the United States; they prefer political union with the United States.

Last week under the fair-minded supervising of Plebiscite Commissioner Erwin D. Canham, editor-emeritus of The Christian Science Monitor, and the presence of representatives of the U.N. Trusteeship Council, they voted their wishes. They voted overwhelmingly to become U.S. territory as a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

There was no political alienation among the Mariana electorate. Here is what happened:

The agreement with the United States required a 55 per cent approval for the plebiscite to be binding. Any American politician would call a 60 per cent a landslide. It was an avalanche — more than 78 per cent voted yes.

The percentage of eligible voters who went to the polls exceeded by far any popular vote in any presidential election ever held in the United States: 90 per cent.

Why, in light of Watergate, Vietnam and high taxes (federal law will apply to the Marianas), did the people of these widely scattered islands in the Pacific want to become Americans?

U. S. rule

The answer: They wanted freedom and security. They had come to cherish both under U.S. rule.

The Micronesians who made up the Future Political Status Commission to negotiate with Ambassador Franklin Haydn Williams, who had wide Pacific experience as president of the Asia Foundation, says of the U.S. administration of their land: "One contribution has been indelible, one achievement almost unqualified — the idea of democratic, representative, constitutional government."

Under Commonwealth status the people of the Marianas will have all the sovereignty and self-government of an American state and all of the security which comes from being a part of the United States.

The next step is up to Congress. It must approve the Commonwealth agreement before it can become operative. The congressional committees and congressional leaders have been closely consulted by Ambassador Williams at every stage of the negotiations.

Congress has been a full participant. This is the way such negotiations should be conducted. This is one reason congressional approval is altogether probable.

How to get arbitration

Sylvia Porter

(Second of three columns)

What did the following recently have in common: a small suburban furniture store; International Telephone & Telegraph; farmers' cooperative involved in chicken production; a candy manufacturer; a Midwestern chain of haberdashery stores; a self-employed writer; a New England antiques dealer?

In the past year, each of these obviously diverse businesses has shared a single experience. All have been among the thousands of businesses opting for settling business disputes via arbitration rather than by litigation.

Arbitration has been in an upsurge in the past decade, as our judicial system has been overwhelmed by lawsuits of all kinds. The method also is less costly, quicker — and has the advantage of protecting the disputing parties against damaging publicity.

At the heart of the procedure is the American Arbitration Assn., which will mark its 50th anniversary in 1976 and which maintains a National Panel of Arbitrators, serving its Commercial Tribunal alone. On this panel are roughly 45,000 men and women in 1,600 communities across the U.S. — who are experts in specific fields, are nominated by leaders in their areas and are put on the panel after careful checking of their qualifications and reputations.

Let's say that you are involved in a business dispute and that you have decided to try arbitration as a desirable alternative to litigation. How do you go about submitting your business dispute to arbitration?

The first step in initiating arbitration is the agreement to arbitrate. This may take the form of a "future dispute arbitration clause" in a contract. But should your contract not include a clause for arbitration, your dispute still can be settled by this method if both parties agree to file an "arbitration submission agreement" with the AAA to resolve your dispute.

No matter how you reach an agreement to arbitrate, all that is required is notification to the AAA and the other party of the claim. The AAA maintains its headquarters at 140 West 51 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10020, as well as at 21 regional offices across the U.S.

On receiving the initiating submission for arbitration, the AAA assigns a staff member to the case, whose official title is Tribunal Administrator. From that point on, he or she is at the disposal of the disputing parties — expediting administration and assisting both sides in all procedural matters until the award is made.

On receiving a request for arbitration or submission agreement, an AAA tribunal administrator sends each of you (parties in the dispute) a copy of the same specifically prepared list of proposed arbitrators, each of whom is technically qualified to resolve your controversy. In drawing up the list, the administrator is guided by the nature of your dispute.

Each of you is allowed seven days to study the list, cross off names you object to and number the remaining names in order of your preference. If either of you desires more information about a proposed arbitrator, the information is given upon your request.

When your lists are returned to the AAA, the tribunal administrator compares your indicated preferences and notes the mutual choices you have made. If you are unable to find a mutual choice on the list, additional lists may be submitted to both of you upon the request of both parties.

If, despite all these efforts to arrive at a choice mutually acceptable to you, you cannot agree upon an arbitrator, the AAA will make administrative appointments. But in no case will an arbitrator whose name was crossed out by either of you be appointed.

Let's say you are satisfied with this procedure. Now, how do you prepare for the arbitration? Since the arbitrator will make his award on the basis of the facts and exhibits presented at your hearing, tomorrow's column will suggest steps you should take.

Every man a legislator

Nicholas Von Hoffman

WASHINGTON — Fifty people sitting in the sun porch of what was once Sen. Hiram Johnson's Washington home. The California Republican, dead these past 30 years, might have approved of the meeting. He was a great one for local, popular control of the machinery of government, and that's what these people from places like Baltimore, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Brooklyn are in the business of trying to do.

They're mostly whites from inner city neighborhoods, people who stayed on after expressions like "inner city" and "urban crisis" fell out of favor and the foundation money was redirected to more fashionable concerns. They have a forlorn tenacity about them, like the young woman from a run-down, mostly black Washington, D.C. neighborhood who, after recounting some of her community organization's accomplishments, began to weep as she predicted that she and her associates would fail, that the people in her area would be driven out with the cockroaches and that local self-government would elude them.

An unstoppable rage

Milton Kotler, the director of the Institute for Neighborhood Studies, which convened this meeting, points out that at the end of the American Revolution, New York and Philadelphia had the only two city governments in the country. New York was already in trouble, but the rage to adopt this form of urban politics was unstoppable.

"By 1922, Boston had a population of 43,000 and had been conducting its municipal business by the general meeting of the inhabitants for 230 years. In some years, as many as 6,000 residents attended the deliberation," Kotler explains. "Yet the townsmen adopted a city government. Instead of 6,000 legislating in common, now only 56 persons ruled. . . . However this decrease may be called representative government, it still amounted to an oligarchic revolution."

"The new alternative has to be every man a legislator," said Sister Paulette, a nun working with a community group in McKees Rock, Pa., but if the municipal representative government has been a self-evident disaster in so many places, no one knows how to re-install direct, democratic rule.

"How do we get power?" another of the conferees asked with little hope of quick answer. "People are so tired of constantly acting as pressure groups, of always protesting without the power to act on their own problems."

There are success stories, of course. One of them, concerning the Northside neighborhood in Brooklyn, was brought to the meeting by Ron Shiffman, a young architect from the Pratt Institute's Center for Community and Environmental Development in New York. When the City moved to demolish the homes of some 90 families to accommodate the expansion of a manufacturing plant, a social worker was able to rally many of the Polish, Ukrainian and Russian-American residents to put up a fight so that, with the help of Shiffman and his students, 41 low-income but private housing units were built to accommodate the evictees.

What was done is impressive: new housing on scattered-site vacant lots at a phenomenally low price of $28,000 a unit, land costs included; but it is also depressing when you reflect on the near heroic measures needed to bring off something that should be routine self-government, if what's left of our neighborhoods are to maintain themselves. In addition to Shiffman and the social workers, there had to be picketing, civil disobedience and unceasing struggle with the municipal bureaucracy.

"Instead of legislating their community affairs," Kotler says, "citizens are reduced to complaint and grievance." Begging and beseeching is what he calls this repetitious, enervating process whereby everyone is so worn out trying to get a stop sign put up or the garbage collected that most people are too drained and too discouraged to attack the larger, more institutional questions.

The social structure and wealth of some suburbs does give their citizens a little more of a handle on things, although the residents of those communities which have had freeways jammed through them will dispute that. However, except in the richest communities and those places in New England that have kept their town meetings, every sort of formal decisions has been taken away from the local level. The people on the block, any block, anywhere, must go miles to beg and beseech, to petition and plead to effect the simplest changes.

The experience of direct self-rule is already in such a remote past, we regard it as an unthinkable impracticality, as a socio-political Eden from which we were driven by the forces of history, never to return. The suggestion that even something as easy to do and as intensely local as the power to zone be vested in a neighborhood assembly is received with incredulous concern. We couldn't handle that. We don't have the expertise. We've lost confidence in ourselves. We know the units of government we depend upon for the most necessary service are failing us, but like the community organizer foreseeing her own failure, we can't imagine we could do it better for ourselves.

Sex in the capital

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Sex has become a booming backdoor business in Washington.

A silkstocking call girl service, for example, provides shapely "masseuses" for diplomats, dignitaries and visiting businessmen seeking $75 thrills.

The girls can be ordered to specification by telephone from dial-a-date outfits, which advertise in the yellow pages. "Let your fingers do the street-walking" might be their motto.

They offer room service at some of Washington's finest hotels. The girls will accept payment in cash, travelers checks or, if the customer prefers credit, sometimes by BankAmericard.

One of our reporters, posing as a potential client, was quoted rates from $20 for a simple massage to $75 for a more titillating experience. The massage promoters were careful not to offer outright intercourse. But the innuendo was clear that sex was the real service for sale.

The mode of sex, said a man at Grecian Dial-A-Massage, was "pretty much up to the masseuse." At Diversified Outside Calls, a woman answering suggested "if you talk to the masseuse," she "might" agree to intercourse. The responses were similar from Dial-A-Date Club, Playmate Internationale and Swingers International.

The most candid of the operators was Hal O'Brien, who runs Selectra Mate and other "outcall" services from a suite high over Washington's famous Dupont Circle. He gives clients a summary of Washington law on the subject, with a specific warning that intercourse with the "masseuse" is a criminal offense.

But he adds meaningfully that his girls "are over 21, and we don't control their acts." He has never known one of them to bring charges against a client.

One tactic used by the masseuses, acknowledged O'Brien, was to strip for action at the same time they refused to submit. Technically, this protects them from prosecution for soliciting. The ensuing sexual act then becomes rape, but the "victims" never file complaints.

Other Washington prostitutes operate out of luxury apartments. They also cater to the city's dignitaries, with price scales running as high as $200 a night.

Washington police are too busy patrolling the streets to keep a watch on philandering in hotels and apartments. Even if the girls are arrested, the police have found it difficult to get convictions.

So the call girl operations in Washington aren't troubled with recession.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Idiot

Government was a serious matter to the ancient Greeks. Holding public office was considered one of the highest honors one could attain.

Anyone who held no public office was called "idiots," meaning private or personal, the idea being that he pursued his private or personal affairs as opposed to one who took part in government.

The Romans also took matters of government seriously. "Idios" entered their language, Latin, as "idiota." The Romans reasoned that anyone who held no public office was incapable, hence ignorant or stupid.

"Idiot" passed through French and entered English as "idiot," where it acquired the meaning of a person of low mentality.

the Soviets establish their embassy on high ground, which will give them a better vantage point for electronic espionage.

At the same time, the Soviets have offered the United States an embassy site in a low area along the Moscow River near the present U.S. chancery. "It's just a little further down the slope," said a source.

The two nations agreed to exchange new chanceries over six years ago, but they have been bickering ever since over sites and plans.

The Russians, with American concurrence, have settled on a 12.5-acre wooded site on Mount Alto, one of the highest points in Washington. They plan to erect a five-building complex, which would resemble a walled fortress.

From this prominent perch, according to our sources, the Soviets will get better results with their sophisticated electronic monitoring equipment. This is used to eavesdrop on long-distance telephone calls which, for the most part, are transmitted by microwave.

Kissinger has strongly urged approval of the new Soviet embassy, although he has full knowledge that it will give the USSR a superior listening post to the one that the Soviets are permitting the United States to build in Moscow.

Reportedly under State Department prodding, the General Services Administration has filed an environmental impact statement calling for ratification "in the spirit of detente." Failure to approve the proposal, says the GSA, could "create an international situation."

Not only have the Soviets provided the U.S. embassy with a low-level submitted. The latest set of plans, according to sources with direct knowledge of the situation, were sent back with a list of 27 objections.

Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, who oversees the State Department budget, has held up approval of the new Soviet embassy until the United States is permitted to go ahead with its construction.

As a result, Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin recently called at the State Department and notified Assistant Secretary Arthur Hartman that the Kremlin had dropped all objections to the U.S. construction plans.

The United States could even use "black bricks," said the frustrated Dobrynin.

Footnote: A State Department spokesman said the Soviets had not raised "objections" but had merely offered "recommendations." Another spokesman in Hartman's office said our account of the conversation with Dobrynin was "inaccurate and incomplete." But he refused to explain the alleged inaccuracies, claiming it "was a private conversation and we don't want to go into it." Our sources, in fact, are wholly familiar with the incident and we have confidence they gave us an accurate report.

As the Romans do

The Milanese businessman flew to Rome for a busy day. In the morning he was to meet with his bankers and business associates, in the afternoon he was to meet with relevant governmental departments.

The businessman met with his counterparts, and after lunch went to the government offices for his meetings. They were empty except for a cleaning woman.

"What's this," said the exasperated businessman, "don't they work here in the afternoons?"

"Oh sir," said the cleaning woman, "you have it wrong. It's in the mornings they don't work. In the afternoons they don't come."

Reporter's notebook

Hazardous job

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Caution: Serving on a school board could be hazardous to your health.

Since December, the nine members of the Stroudsburg Area School Board have gone through what one board member describes as the most controversial year on record. One member has reportedly suffered a mild stroke, one has ulcers and a third recently developed high blood pressure.

"Anybody who runs for the school board has rocks in their head," commented board secretary Dr. John Lim at a recent press conference after the press criticized the board for holding closed meetings in alleged violation of Pennsylvania's "Sunshine Law."

Judging from health reports on several members, Lim may be right.

Lim himself underwent an operation April 15 to remove an ulcer and is down to 90 pounds.

Dr. W. Edmund Magann underwent tests after a heated school board meeting to determine the cause of slurred speech. His wife, Dolly, said her husband could have suffered a circulation problem or a mild stroke.

And a third board member, who asked that his name be withheld, said recent pressures to cut a proposed 25-mill increase in district real estate taxes boosted his blood pressure.

"I wonder if it's worth it?" asked the board member, referring to his non-paying position. "I think that sums up what the nine of us are thinking."

Since challenged by press and public to open their previously closed policy meeting, the board held two sessions June 4 and 10 to hear how the public wants a proposed $5.9 million budget and tax increase cut.

Along with suggestions came heavy criticism of the board and the district's administration. And board president Lloyd Manter said members have been harassed at home and at their business by residents angered by the proposed tax increase and board conduct.

Dolly Magann, while her husband was still in Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia undergoing tests, said the stress heaped on board members "triggered" his ailment.

Lim said it contributed to his ulcer and probably will cause another.

Serving on the board for 22 years and seeking another term, along with Magann, in the November election, Lim said the board has been through more distress controversy and attempts to "discredit" the body since December than during the entire history of the district.

On Dec. 20, 1974, state auditors found the board did a lot of business with a sports store owned by Lim's son and was missing proof that it solicited competitive price quotations. Administrators chalked up the error to poor book-keeping during the 1972-73 school year.

Residents have blasted members for building a $4.2 million open-space middle school and for allegedly interfering with how a varsity basketball coach played his students. The board defended the school and denied the other accusation.

On Jan. 31 this year, a seven-year-old boy ran in front of a district school bus and was killed.

The driver of another district school bus was fired earlier this year after he allowed a 15-year-old to drive the bus.

Lim said although the cumulative effect has eroded the health of at least three board members, he feels serving on the school board is worth the hassles.

Board member Walter J. Adelmann agreed, but noted some members spend 40 hours a month on school business, for which they are not paid.

Lim is the only paid board member, receiving $1,200 a year as board secretary.

"The pressure is not brought on by the public but by internal pressure to make the right decision," said Lim of the turmoil members are undergoing while deciding how to reduce a proposed tax increase without ruining the quality of education.

"But," Lim added, "if it is not appreciated by the general public, then I would say it is not worth the grief."

"It has been equally frustrating because too many factors are beyond the power and control of the school board."

He said the board did generate some of its own trouble.

"The prime and often times the only concern of the directors has been thinking of the property owners, and too often they did not raise the millage enough."

Did directors do that last year?

"Hell, yes."

S. Korean army put on high alert

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korea put its military forces and civilian employees on high alert Tuesday on the eve of the 25th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War.

It was the latest move to bolster national security to meet what the South Koreans view as an increasing North Korean military threats.

A government spokesman said special "grade two" security went into effect for 600,000 civilian government officials, under which all leaves were canceled and 20 per cent of the employees were ordered to report for night and holiday duty.

The special security upgraded "grade three" emergency duty in force since Saturday, under which leaves were also canceled and 10 per cent of the officials had to report for night and holiday duty.

A defense ministry spokesman said the nation's 600,000-member armed forces were also ordered on special alert in observance of the occasion.

The government is also pushing a plan to organize a 3.5-million Civil Defense Corps made up of men between the ages of 17 and 50 and of women volunteers. The corps will not include an additional 2.5 million members of the Homeland Reserve Forces.

Just before dawn on Sunday, June 25, 1950, 10 divisions of crack North Korean troops, backed by tanks and artillery, struck across the 38th parallel into South Korea in a surprise attack.

Within two days, they captured the South Korean capital of Seoul, and South Korean forces were in full retreat.

With United Nations backing, American President Harry S. Truman ordered Gen. Douglas MacArthur to move American ground forces from Japan to stem to the Communist onslaught.

In the ensuing fighting, Seoul changed hands three more times. U.S. forces invaded North Korea, hundreds of thousands of Chinese "volunteers" entered the war and a total of 33,629 Americans were killed.

In June, 1951, the Soviet Union proposed truce talks and after two years of negotiations, the Korean Armistice was signed July 27, 1953. It has never been replaced by a formal peace treaty, and tension remains high on the peninsula.

Gandhi can stay in office

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Indian Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi can remain in office while it considers her appeal of an election abuse conviction.

But the court stripped her of her right to vote as a member of Parliament.

The ruling by Supreme Court Justice Krishna Iyer took the form of a conditional stay of Mrs. Gandhi's June 12 lower court conviction of irregularities in the 1971 parliamentary elections.

Attorneys for the 58-year-old Indian leader had asked for an absolute stay, under which she would have kept her voting rights in Parliament.

An estimated 5,000 supporters of Raj Narain, the Socialist leader who brought the charges against Mrs. Gandhi, clapped, danced and shouted slogans outside the Supreme Court building when Iyer's ruling was announced.

In contrast, Mrs. Gandhi's supporters wore glum, shocked looks. Political observers said the ruling, while favorable to the prime minister in the legal sense, was sure to tarnish her political image.

Senior cabinet ministers and leaders of Mrs. Gandhi's ruling Congress party consulted with the prime minister in her residence.

Supreme Court eases up on annexation of suburbs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in a 5-3 ruling Tuesday, gave southern cities subject to the 1965 Voting Rights Act some hope they can annex predominantly white suburbs without running afoul of the law.

But Justice Byron R. White cautioned that annexations must preserve proportional black representation on city councils, and the cities must prove they were not trying to dilute the inner-city vote.

The ruling was a partial victory for officials of Richmond, Va., who had been attempting since 1962 to annex portions of neighboring Chesterfield County.

But Richmond now must go back to federal district court and prove it had sound economic and administrative reasons for the annexation, without any racial motivation.

The city has not held a council election since 1970. Presumably a new election must await more court decisions.

In other opinions as the Court moved toward summer adjournment next week, the justices further restricted the power of federal courts to interfere in state criminal matters, and upheld the right of the Federal Aviation Administration to keep sensitive airline safety reports from the public.

White said the Richmond annexation, although reducing black voting strength from 52 per cent to 42 per cent of the population, did not on its face violate the 1965 act if blacks still had proportional representation.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, a Richmond resident, did not participate in the case. Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote a biting dissent, and was joined by William O. Douglas and Thurgood Marshall.

Brennan said "the record is replete with statements by Richmond officials which prove beyond question that the predominant (if not the sole) motive and desire of the negotiators ... was to acquire 44,000 additional white citizens for Richmond in order to avert a transfer of political control to what was fast becoming a black population majority."

The added restriction on federal court powers in criminal cases came in a California obscenity case involving "Deep Throat." A three-judge federal court ruled the obscenity law unconstitutional while state criminal charges were pending against a Buena Vista theater owner.

White, writing for a 5-4 majority, said federal courts should abstain from constitutional rulings until state courts have acted. The decision reverses the three-judge court, leaving the constitutional question of California law at least temporarily in the hands of the state courts.

In the airline case, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and six other justices said the Freedom of Information Act gives the FAA an exemption which it can use to keep airline safety reports secret.

The FAA argued successfully that disclosure would jeopardize the openness of airlines to FAA investigation.

In another action Tuesday the Court handed the Justice Department its second antitrust defeat in a week by declaring, 6 to 3, that large national firms can acquire smaller local ones without violating the Clayton Act.

Uganda's President may still kill lecturer

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — President Idi Amin of Uganda Tuesday sent a telegram to Queen Elizabeth II threatening to carry out the execution of a British lecturer next week and expressing concern over alleged British plans to invade his east African nation.

Amin said 61-year-old Dennis Hills, convicted of treason for calling the Uganda chief of state a "village tyrant" in an unpublished manuscript, "will be executed" July 4 unless British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan flies to Kampala for talks.

Callaghan told Parliament Monday he was prepared to visit the Uganda capital but only if the death sentence against Hills were lifted first. Amin has already postponed the execution date once.

Amin handed the five-page telegram to British acting High Commissioner James Hennessey who later described the meeting as cordial.

"General Amin expressed great concern about the suggestion that British troops could invade Uganda," Uganda radio quoted the president as telling the Queen. Amin Monday accused London of massing troops in Kenya to attack Uganda if he went ahead with the execution of lecturer Dennis Hills.

The president again attacked the Queen's personal envoy, Lt. Gen. Sir Chandos Blair, who returned to Britain Tuesday from Kampala.

"Had it not been for the hot-tempered behavior of General Blair, I'm sure his mission could have been successful," Amin said.

Western diplomats in Kampala said Amin's friendly attitude toward Hennessey contrasted sharply with his mood Monday.

Was CIA guilty of 'dirtiest trick of all'?

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Earlier searches through the Central Intelligence Agency's bag of "dirty tricks" have uncovered a secret foreign war, a coup d'etat and an effort to subvert the internal politics of a Latin American country.

But the pressing question is whether the dirtiest trick of all — murder — lies deep in that bag of covert deals, cover stories and misinformation.

That is the question the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence has been trying to answer and its chairman Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, seems to have no doubt of the outcome.

"The CIA was involved in murder plots, murder attempts, assassinations, if you would," he said. "I know the facts."

These facts have spilled out atop earlier evidence the CIA was involved in a secret war in Laos between 1966 and 1972, a coup d'etat in South Vietnam in 1963 and an effort to subvert the internal politics of Chile in 1973.

Knowledgeable sources assert that the most serious evidence of CIA assassination plots involves a variety of attempts to eliminate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., reported on his return from a recent visit to Havana that Castro claims to have proof of more than 100 attempts on his life, some of them involving the CIA.

Castro promised to forward the proof, and McGovern has said he would pass it along to the committee as soon as it arrives.

Meanwhile, the committee has summoned John Roselli, a reputed underworld figure, to testify next week about an alleged attempt in early 1961 to poison Castro, his brother Raul and their cohort Che Guevara with a slow-acting compound. The plot reportedly was formulated during the latter half of 1960 in the Eisenhower administration.

Dramatically, Chicago gangland chief Sam Giancana was murdered last Thursday after published reports linked him and Roselli to this anti-Castro plot. Those reports indicated the Senate committee was interested in interviewing Giancana.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., vice chairman of the Senate committee, told newsmen Friday that committee members noted "with interest" that Giancana had been "done away with." But staff members said Roselli, whose life may now be in jeopardy from mobsters, is the more important plot figure.

Besides Castro, other names which have been mentioned in connection with the alleged assassination plots include Dominican Republic dictator Rafael Trujillo, President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam and Chilean President Salvador Allende.

Knowledgeable sources say the CIA provided weapons to Dominican Republic military men who gunned down Trujillo, May 31, 1961. This, presumably, was the successful assassination attempt involving the CIA which Rep. James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, of the House Select Intelligence Committee referred to publicly last June 5.

The Central Intelligence Agency also mounted an operation in Vietnam known as the "Phoenix Program" to liquidate 20,000 suspected Viet Cong local leaders. The program was directed by current CIA Director William E. Colby, then assigned to Saigon. Colby's critics later tried to make the program an issue to kill his appointment.

Evidence also has surfaced indicating the United States occasionally flirted with the coup attempts by dissident elements in a variety of countries — and one in which a national leader, Diem, actually was assassinated.

The Pentagon Papers, released by antiwar dissident Daniel Ellsberg, contained numerous secret cables between the White House and Henry Cabot Lodge, then U.S. ambassador in Saigon, which show that President Kennedy allowed high American officials to encourage the South Vietnamese dissidents plotting to overthrow the Diem regime.

In one cable Lodge recommended to Secretary of State Dean Rusk that the United States might even review the developing plots to assess their chance of success and avoid embarrassment for Washington. But Lodge clearly stated the United States should have nothing to do with any assassination attempt on the part of the Saigon plotters.

Diem and his brother were arrested by military units Nov. 1, 1963, and executed while being taken to the Joint General Headquarters in an armored car.

In Chile, military officers moved against Marxist President Allende in the fall of 1973. The Nixon administration's dislike of Chile's leftward swing was well known and immediately prompted questions as to whether the CIA had been involved in the anti-Allende coup.

At first, U.S. officials asserted the United States was taken by surprise, and was not involved.

But in a secret session with a House subcommittee — which eventually became public Sept. 8, 1974 — Colby later acknowledged that the agency spent $11 million dollars in preceding years to influence Chilean politics.

Allende died in the coup. Whether he was assassinated or committed suicide is still in dispute.

In Cambodia, the CIA similarly played a role behind the scenes which, according to Cornell professor George McT-

Kahn, was aimed at undermining the position of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the volatile, left-leaning leader.

Although the State Department declared its surprise when Sihanouk was overthrown on March 18, 1970, Kahn has produced evidence from his various trips to Cambodia that the CIA backed the Khmer Serei (Free Cambodians) as an opposition group to Sihanouk.

After Premier Gen. Lon Nol deposed Sihanouk, who was abroad at the time, the United States flew ethnic Cambodian soldiers in U.S. planes into the capital of Phnom Penh to bolster the new government, according to Kahn.

There are a host of other similar accusations against the CIA.

Landon GOP's grand old man

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — He was bent with exertion as he walked up the long hill from the barn to the white brick mansion but he straightened, smiled and waved a cheery hand salute.

For the Grand Old Party's grand old man — 87-year-old Alfred Mossman Landon — it was his typical ranch greeting. "I didn't think you'd make it this early," he said. "I just got the horses in and was going up to the house for a cup of coffee."

Instead, he turned back to the small barn where his horse, "Big Red," and a pony were stabled.

A five-mile ride along the Kansas River became a morning ritual for Landon when he built the big house in the rolling country of west Topeka in 1937. A year before as the Republican presidential nominee, he lost heavily to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Landon, wearing riding boots, red coat and hunting cap, told his visitor it was too wet to ride. Red seemed puzzled that his master of 15 years should brush him and do other chores, but not get out the English saddle for their daily exercise.

The former Kansas governor, who lives alone with his wife, Theo, on the 26-acre estate screened from the road by trees, takes care of the horses himself, even shoveling out the stable and pitching hay.

"Even in bad weather, winter weather, it will just keep you in that much better shape, even if you can't ride," he said.

In spite of his age, Landon refuses to retire. He still supervises his oil lease with 47 wells in Greenwood County. He also keeps loose control over four radio stations, including WREN in Topeka, where his office is located.

Landon usually spends his afternoons in his office lined with pictures from the past and present, among them Thomas Dewey, Herbert Hoover, Sen. Hugh Scott. A message on the photo of Landon's presidential running mate, Frank Knox, reads, "To Alf M. Landon — My captain in a worthwhile fight."

Although his slow, sometimes faltering speech can mislead a person unfamiliar with the balding man in the black framed glasses, Landon's mind is sharp. He still does more work than many men 20 years his junior.

"He scoffs at people who retire," WREN General Manager Russ Gibson said. "He tries to encourage them not to."

While at the office, Landon, now dressed in an immaculate dark suit, reviewed daily reports of production from his oil field in addition to daily lists of time sales to advertisers for each of his stations.

And he talked about politics. Although he generally has refrained from early predictions of political races, Landon said President Ford should be elected if the economy continues to improve.

"I ordinarily do not make any predictions about an election until the Saturday before," he said. "But Mr. Ford is gaining in strength all the time because of his stability under pressure. That's the first requirement of a leader, whether on the field of battle or in the council chamber."

The GOP elder statesman often has a luncheon meeting with state and local businessmen or political cronies. The telephone in his sprawling white columned mansion rings throughout the day as callers seek to meet with him.

In between calls, Landon sat talking in his dark-paneled study, a room that exudes an aroma of wood smoke from the fireplace and an air of history from its momentoes. The study, more than any other part of the house, seems to be his room, with its many books, it's "Beecher's Bible" — the rifle that played an important part in the birth of "bleeding Kansas" — and his mammoth desk.

As he lit his pipe, Landon said his retirement from candidate politics — after he lost to Roosevelt — had allowed him to become an independent figure. Perhaps because of this, his opinion is valued by leaders at all levels of government.

"After the 1936 election, I had to decide what to do," he said. "I could have gone to the Senate easy enough in 1938 if I had wanted to. I decided to be active in politics. But when you are a candidate or support a candidate actively, you are tied to the rest of the party ticket."

He paused, sucked on his pipe, and squinted at the ceiling. "Over the years, it's really amazing the position I came to occupy," he said with a crusty grin. "I think it is. Maybe you don't, but so what?"

The Republican patriarch reads profusely, not only books of history and politics that line his study, but newspapers and current news magazines.

Landon predicted busing to achieve racial balance would be one of the biggest issues in the 1976 campaign. He said so far, busing has not been considered a big campaign issue, but that it would have an impact on the Democrats, particularly after the upheaval it sparked in Boston.

He said it is ironic that several main issues of 1975 parallel those he campaigned on in 1936: inflation, the fallacy of a planned economy, growing centralization of power in Washington and long range land use planning.

It was a matter-of-fact statement from Landon as the day-long visit ended.

Gelatin recipes

By BARBARA GIBBONS

End the day with a rainbow! What better way to wind up a weighty dinner than with a jeweled confection of fresh fruit set like gemstones in a colorful three-layer gelatin creation?

Now that nearly every supermarket sells sugar-free gelatin mixes, these pretty concoctions are no longer off-limits to the calorie-wise. (Ordinary gelatin mixes are mainly sugar; the gelatin and flavoring account for only a tablespoon or so. As a result, regular gelatin are a weighty 160 calories a cupful, while the sugar-free varieties are only 16.)

Here's a favorite combination: peaches, strawberries and oranges in a three-layer rainbow of yellow, red and orange. Follow this recipe, or dream up your own combinations. Any fresh fruit can be substituted — except fresh pineapple (canned is OK) — and the gelatin flavors and

Alternatives to canning offered

By LORA SHARPE
Family Fare Editor

STROUDSBURG — There are alternatives to canning home garden produce if canning seems like a never-ending chore.

Homemakers can use several other methods to keep their garden fruits and vegetables — freezing, drying and pickling. In some cases, these methods might save the homemaker time and/or money over the canning process.

Choice of a preservation method is determined by many number of factors — availability and cost of equipment, time available, preferred taste, the ease with which the finished product can be served.

Freezing

Freezing, says the Consumer and Food Economics Institute, is one of the easiest and least time-consuming ways to preserve food at home.

Freezing, though, is not recommended for all produce. Lettuce and other salad greens, radishes and tomatoes (except as juice or cooked) should not be frozen.

The cost of the initial investment in a freezer and the cost of electricity for its operation should also be taken into consideration.

There is equipment necessary for freezing. Containers should be purchased — they can be bags, plastic containers, sheets. It might be a better investment to buy reusable containers. The size and capacity of each container should be considered.

Fruits and vegetables can be packed in liquid or dry, after preparation as if for serving.

Syrup, sugar or unsweetened packs may be used. Ascorbic acid might be used to prevent darkening of frozen fruits.

Drying is one of the oldest food preservation methods. Drying foods is recommended chiefly in places where weather conditions favor outside drying. Weather conditions in Pennsylvania are not the best for drying foods.

If homemakers choose to dry foods, they should choose a dry time of year. They might also consider drying in an oven or on the range.

Foods must have enough moisture removed in the drying process to prevent spoilage and also to control microbial growth. Enzymes which keep the produce maturing must be inactivated.

Oven drying should be done at the lowest thermostat setting and the oven door should be open. Simple trays should be used; produce should be spread in single layers or stirred every half hour.

Food needs to be cured for a week after drying. Curing entails combining the food in a large container in a hot room and stirring it once or twice a day. The food is then packed in suitable containers.

Fruits are easier to dry and should be pre-treated before hand. Treatment varies with fruit variety. Fruits should dry in four to eight hours and be pliable when dried.

Vegetables need to be blanched. Vegetables also dry in four to eight hours and should shatter when hit with a hammer when dried.

Pickling

Pickling can be as time-consuming as canning. There is also equipment needed for pickling — and the pickled products need to be processed as if they were being canned.

There are some quick pickle products though, which will keep for anywhere from a month to several weeks, according to Heinz' "Guide to Successful Pickling."

Pickled eggs and beets, peach chutney, deli salads of beans and relishes can often be simply pickled and refrigerated without the canning process.

Residents to help canners

STROUDSBURG — Two Pocono residents have been named resource persons for homemakers with food preservation problems. The residents will provide telephone counseling for homemakers with questions.

Elaine Frisbie, East Stroudsburg, and Florence Oliver, Pocono Summit, have received training from the Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension Service in canning and freezing procedures.

The extension service has initiated the community resource program to help alleviate the burden of the county extension offices and provide homemakers with more information outlets.

A training session for three counties' resource persons was held Tuesday in Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Frisbie can be reached at 424-1266 and Mrs. Oliver can be contacted at 839-3273.

Both can answer questions, chiefly on canning problems, from homemakers. Questions for which they have no answers will be referred to the extension office in Stroudsburg, 421-6430.

Dry ice preserves meat outdoors

NEW YORK — Summertime means hot times — weather-wise, that is. And hot weather brings on the urge to millions each year to get going on that long-planned vacation to the great outdoors.

For those who take to the outdoors — away from the conveniences of home and electricity — knowing how to store meats safely using "hot" ice (dry ice) could make that vacation all the more enjoyable.

Improper storage is one of the main factors leading to foodborne illness attributed to meat, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The length of time dry ice will be effective in storing meats depends on certain conditions, and if these conditions are maintained.

Keep in mind that meat kept hard frozen (at zero degrees Fahrenheit or below) in a home-freezer will remain wholesome for months. A dry ice freezer chest will not be that efficient, but it could provide safe storage for the average two-week vacation, if properly handled.

Here are a few suggestions from meat inspectors of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) on storing meat with dry ice:

— Use an air-tight, well-insulated container large enough to hold only the desired amount of meat and about 15 to 25 pounds of dry ice. A container half-full of frozen food will not keep as long as a container packed with frozen food to its full capacity.

For example, a 25-pound piece of dry ice will keep temperatures below freezing for two to three days in a 10-cubic foot home freezer with a half-load of frozen food, three to four days in a fully-loaded container.

— Be sure that meat is fresh, clean and hard frozen before you place it on dry ice.

— Wrap meat loosely in small portions in moisture-resistant material, such as aluminum foil or freezer paper so that the cold air may circulate more effectively.

— Do not place dry ice directly on packaged meat. Place the ice on cardboard or small boards on top of packages.

— Use a separate container for other perishable items, so that the number of times the chest is opened will be limited. Be sure that meats to be used first are located on top and so on, so that the chest may be reclosed quickly.

— Keep packed dry ice freezer chest in the coolest spot available — away from direct sunlight and in a well-ventilated area where air can circulate around it. While traveling, avoid keeping it in the hot trunk, if possible.

— Replace dry ice before the supply is depleted. It may be wise to replace it when no more than two-thirds of your original supply has evaporated.

BPW installs officers for upcoming year

STROUDSBURG — The Business and Professional Women's Club of Stroudsburg installed its officers for the upcoming year at its June meeting.

Officers are as follows: Joyce Rutt, president; Margaret Albright, first vice president; Dorothy Davenport, second vice president; Marion Bush, recording secretary; Ann Williams, corresponding secretary; and Melba Kobal, treasurer.

Elsie Geary, District 9 Director of the Pennsylvania Federation of Business and Professional Women, was the installing officer.

Each officer received a flower symbolic of various virtues upon her installation.

Outgoing president Margaret Cannon received a past president's pin and thanked members for their cooperation during her two years as president. Miss Cannon presented the new president with her pin. Harriet Nevil, the Stroud-burg club's young careerist, presented her talk on "A Woman's Place in the world." Mrs. Nevil had been chosen District 8's young careerist and represented the district at the state convention.

Old-fashioned thrift

Indian remedy

Several years ago I was told about an old Indian remedy for burns. I have tried it on sunburns, poison ivy and household burns and have found it to work faster and better than anything I ever bought in a store. It's the plant aloe vera (commonly called the medicine plant).

You just slice off a part of a leaf and rub on the jelly-like substance contained in the leaf.

It's an attractive plant which can be grown in a pot in a window. Your local greenhouse can find one for you for a very small cost. — Katie Hess HARVEYS LAKE — The annual Once family reunion will be held July 12 at Hanson's Park, Harvey's Lake. The business meeting will begin at 2 p.m. Families should bring a picnic lunch.

Wrong side

When the Civil War ended, the Cherokee Nation, which had aligned itself with the Confederacy, lost most of its sovereignty and millions of acres of land under Reconstruction and the rising sentiment against Indians in the westward expansion of white settlers.

Opposition gears arts center block

HARRISBURG (UPI) — It was the unveiling of a new work of art — a tribute to the genius of the late architect Louis I. Kahn.

And for Gov. Milton J. Shapp, the model of the proposed Pocono Arts Center was a dream come true — a cultural hub in the Mountains that will make a name for Pennsylvania in the world of art.

The model was unveiled last week at a gala preview that included comments from Shapp, the architect's widow and music performed by a string quartet.

But even before the cookies and punch were gone, opponents were gathering information that could wreck the project before it begins.

"They claim it will cost much more than the $37 million estimated by Shapp, that most of the new tax revenue will go to the federal government and that few Pennsylvanians will use the area.

The center would include an open air theater, a stage house, and two small theaters — all located on about 700 acres of land in the Pocono Mountains, 80 miles north of Philadelphia.

It would be in the Lehigh Gorge State Park in Carbon County — a wilderness area the state bought to protect from developers, who already own giant sections of land in the mountains.

Shapp is using a study prepared by Arthur D. Little, Inc. to justify construction, claiming it would bring millions of dollars in jobs and new taxes to Pennsylvania.

From the first day the plan was announced two years ago, opponents have been skeptical of Shapp's motives and methods. One question involves land acquisition.

Casey puzzled

"We're really puzzled about the history of land acquisition in this case," said Auditor General Robert P. Casey.

He claimed that Shapp's aides said the land was being purchased to save it from developers, when in reality it was to get a good site for the center.

Casey also said: —The governor's estimate of $37 million was deceptive. If 20-year bonds are sold to finance construction, Casey said the cost would be more than $70 million.

Hair transplants for baldness?

I have tried every kind of treatment for my baldness. The money goes, but the hair does not come back. Should I consider hair transplants by surgery?

Mr. R.W., Ohio

Dear Mr. W.: The disappointment that follows the unfulfilled promises of cures for baldness is great. Consequently, many men repeat the cycle of going from one "promise" to another.

Expensive ointments, massages and electrical treatment may prevent rapid loss of hair, but rarely is there any return of hair that is already lost.

Surgical hair transplanting is still in an early stage. Yet, in the hands of highly trained skin specialists, some cases of hair transplantation have been effective.

Hair follicles are removed from the area where the hair is still abundant and then implanted deep into the bald area.

The process is a long one and must be performed in many stages. Therefore, time and patience are essential.

Our community is fighting the battle against adding fluoride to our water. How can we convince the opponents that this has been beneficial to growing children in other parts of the country?

Mr. B.B., Okla.

Dear Mr. B.: The advantage of fluoridation has been accepted by scientists, physicians and dentists all over the country.

have been demonstrated, there will always be some diehards who will refuse to acknowledge the benefits.

I once had a patient who was a firm disbeliever. When I asked him why, his dogmatic answer was, "Because." There is absolutely no way to counteract the argument of "because."

The United States Public Health Service has accumulated statistics on the advantages of fluoridation for the young, and even for the elderly.

Mosquitoes can kill Fido

Heartworm disease grows in Monroe dogs

STROUDSBURG — Area veterinarians have pinpointed several areas where heartworm is an endemic disease.

Dog owners residing in these areas are urged to have their pets tested and treated.

Heartworm disease, which is transmitted by mosquitoes, has only recently been established in Monroe County. The disease can be fatal to dogs if not treated in its early stages.

Dr. Craig S. Ott of the Barton Heights Veterinary Hospital in Stroud Township has found three areas where the disease is prevalent.

One is the Laurel Lake housing development in Bartonsville, another is the Fifth Street Pond and Wallace Street area in Stroudsburg and a third is in the swampy areas of Analomink.

Since the disease is transmitted by mosquitoes, dogs living near mosquito-breeding spots are particularly susceptible, Dr. Ott explained.

"Most people in those areas are worried and should be," the veterinarian said. "People who have their dogs chained outside, giving them the greatest exposure to mosquito bites don't realize how much of a problem it (heartworm disease) is."

Heartworm disease has only recently been established in Monroe County, according to George Fox, county vector control agent.

A staff member of the Stroudsburg Animal Clinic said the disease is much more prevalent now. In past years, the clinic treated only one or two cases, mostly dogs from the southern United States.

But this year about half a dozen animals who "haven't even left the area" have been treated.

Dr. Warren N. Davis of Lake Ariel said he is doing more testing for the disease now, but not finding any more cases than usual. He said people are more aware of heartworm disease.

To test for the disease, a doctor takes a blood sample from the dog and checks under the microscope for immature worms, called microfilariae, according to the Animal Clinic of Mount Pocono.

If no microfilariae are present, a dog can be given a preventive medicine. If microfilariae are in the blood sample, the doctor must determine the extent of the disease.

No cases of heartworm disease have been found in dogs brought to the Animal Clinic of Mount Pocono.

Severe heartworm infections can damage the dog's heart and other organs before visible symptoms may appear.

Typical symptoms — coughing, labored breathing, uncommon weakness and tiring — are usually seen by the time the disease is in its advanced stages.

County vector control agent Fox said some men from Harrisburg are coming this week to check mosquitoes.

He said he intends to work on the problem this summer.

Northeast rail plan on track

By THOMAS P. SOUTHWICK
Hartford News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Ford administration hopes to have a new proposal to deal with the bankrupt Northeast railroads ready to present to the Congress within a month, Transportation Secretary William Coleman said Tuesday.

The plan will provide for both establishment of a new, federally sanctioned railroad called Conrail, and for the sale of some lines not included in Conrail to the solvent railroad companies of the west and south.

Coleman revealed the outlines of the new plan, but none of the details, at a meeting on Tuesday with New England congressmen.

The plan represents a compromise between the Transportation Department, which backs a sale of northeast lines to the solvent rail companies, and the United States Railway Association, charged with establishing Conrail.

"The administration will support the Conrail plan," Coleman told the lawmakers. "But we want to see whether it is possible, once Conrail is formed, for the solvent railroads to take over some of the lines left out of Conrail."

A preliminary plan for Conrail released by the USRA earlier this year called for abandonment of some 6,200 miles of marginally profitable branch lines.

Coleman ruled out administration support for federal acquisition of the rail rights of way, a plan backed by a number of Northeast lawmakers.

He said that federal acquisition of the rights of way would open a Pandora's Box of troubles for the government.

"It would mean that every time there is a labor dispute or a fare increase it would be a political decision made at the White House," Coleman said.

BHC to display project

This ol' house improves

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — In November it had peeling paint, holes in the floor and piles of rubbish.

Today it has all new plumbing and wiring, fresh paint and aluminum siding.

Renovations at the gold and white house at 52 Borough St. were completed in May as a project of the Better Housing Council (BHC) of Monroe County.

The housing council will hold an open house from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday to show the community what they have done.

Council president James Hanscome said they had opened the house to members of the East Stroudsburg Borough Council who suggested an open house.

"They felt everyone should see how much we had accomplished on a non-profit basis," Hanscome said.

BHC acquired the house from the county commissioners after the county received the property in lieu of taxes, and planned to renovate it to sell to a low-income family.

The front and back porches were removed and the foundations extended to provide for a dining area and larger living room in front and larger bedrooms in the rear.

BHC added cement steps and stoops to replace the porches on the front and side.

Inside, workers installed new electrical wiring, plumbing, lighting, and heating.

New steps were installed from the side entrance to the basement, which needed a floor. Six inches of insulation were installed on the basement ceiling.

Workers installed unfinished pine cabinets in the kitchen and later finished them. They also installed a new sink and stove and laid a tile floor.

BHC also had to install a whole new bathroom and had to pay $800 to East Stroudsburg to get the home hooked up to the sewer lines.

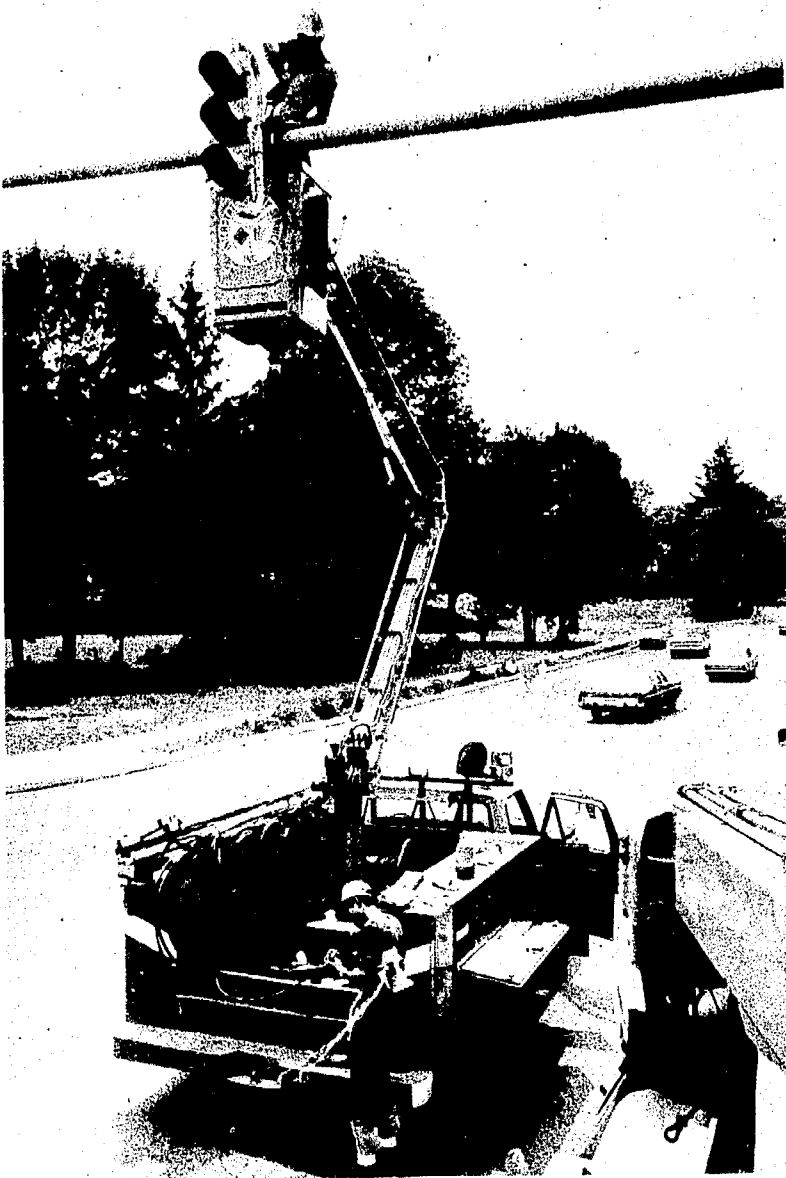

Wall to wall short shag carpeting was laid in all rooms except the kitchen and bathroom.

Barry Tretheway of RKR-Hess Associates said it was cheaper to lay the carpet because the floor was uneven and would have needed shoring if anything other than carpet were installed.

Improper land regulation greater threat than Tocks

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

WEST TRENTON, N.J. — The seven counties surrounding the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWNRA) are doomed to suffer unless proper land use controls are instituted soon, the director of the Tocks Island Dam restudy said Tuesday.

Raymond Tillman, of URS-Madigan Praeger and Conklin and Rossant, said more harm will be caused from the lack of zoning than from building the Tocks Island Dam.

"The future of the area, even without Tocks, is dependent on state, county and local governments enacting and then enforcing tough land use laws," said Tillman.

One thing that became evident during the Tocks restudy, Tillman said, was the lack of effective controls in many areas surrounding the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The restudy addresses the issue when it outlined regional impacts from the proposed 37-mile-long lake north on the Delaware River from Shawnee-on-Delaware.

"There is little doubt that the combination of a return to normal economic conditions, the presence of a nearly completed interstate highway system and the absence of comprehensive land use controls in the area will have far greater adverse effect than will the proposed Tocks Island Lake Project or alternatives to it," the study stated.

Tillman said adverse impacts from poor development of land could be many times worse than the impact on the counties from the Tocks Dam.

However, Tillman and Daniel Greenbaum, another consultant, conceded development of the four counties (Monroe, Pike and Northampton in Pennsylvania and Orange and Sullivan in New York and Warren and Sussex in New Jersey) will grow faster if the dam is built.

The study, which is meant to be a guide to Congress for a final decision on whether or not to build the dam, also noted that the recreation area and dam project will have an adverse impact on local residents' life styles.

It will also strain local governments trying to provide adequate municipal services such as fire protection.

Some positive effects will be a projected gain in tax revenues over a long period of time and the creation of employment in the surrounding areas.

Indians may sue to get Tocks

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — Charging that land designated for the proposed Tocks Island project was "taken from the Indians by devious means" during colonial times, the head of an American Indian Group disclosed Tuesday the group may file suit to have the Tocks Island land set aside for Indian use.

James Crews, chairman of the Pennsylvania Coalition of American Natives and Indian Associations, told Gov. Shapp's Task Force on Indian Affairs, that "we feel these lands, traditional Indian lands" should revert to the Indians.

During the 1730s, the sons of William Penn and others involved in the Penn colonial government tricked the Delaware Indians out of thousands of acres of land along the Delaware and Lehigh Rivers by means of a land grab remembered in Pennsylvania history as "the walking purchase."

While Crews did not refer to "the walking purchase" by name in his remarks to the governor's Indian commission, he said afterwards that this was the "devious" strategy used by the whites to seize the Tocks land.

The Tocks Island area would be in the northern area of the huge territory stolen from the Indians by the Penn government.

The Indian group intends to file suit in federal court in early 1976 to press the question of the land ownership. Crews said. He declined to say who would be named as plaintiffs.

Job action still threat to ESSC

EAST STROUDSBURG — Picket signs are ready, but one local leader of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) hopes the last minute negotiations will head off a July 1 strike by the union.

"I have established a picketing committee. We have the signs made. We have our picket positions," said Gerald L. Smeltz, president of the AFSCME local at East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC).

Smeltz said he hopes the state will budge from its offer of a 3.5 per cent wage increase during negotiations that resume Sunday in Harrisburg.

AFSCME officials have asked for a $2,000 a year boost in workers' salaries, but Smeltz said the union probably would settle for what the state granted its state police — a $1,300 a year pay hike and a dental plan.

If a settlement is not reached Sunday, the union is scheduled to strike Tuesday, July 1. Smeltz said given the time to take a rank and file vote, picketing probably won't start for a week after the strike target date.

Prisoner reform is failing, local law officials agree

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — All the rehabilitation in the world will not help a convicted criminal unless he wants to be helped.

Monroe County probation officers Henry McCool and Reginald Nauman said the change "must come from within."

McCool and Nauman were responding to a recent study by the state Bureau of Corrections which shows about half the people released from correctional facilities eventually return charged with new crimes.

"The problem lies with the individual," McCool stated Monday. "If he wants to be helped he will be but nobody will force him."

Nauman said rehabilitation is only a word. Most first time offenders know the difference between right and wrong. The more crimes a person commits, the harder it becomes to help him go straight, Nauman added.

McCool said that some criminals look at prison as "a country club" with television, no work, three meals a day and shelter. He said jail seems hard to the first time offenders but to those who have been there before and know the ropes, it is easy because they take advantage of the less experienced convicts.

County Dist. Atty. James F. Marsh agreed that some criminals refer to a few prisons in the state as country clubs.

"We ought to have work gangs so the prospect of jail being hard and not a nice place to be is a deterrent to crime," Marsh said. "It ought to revert back to jail being a place they don't like to go."

Marsh added, "Rehabilitation is a failure in the prison system and most criminals don't want to be rehabilitated. We might as well take the position that prisons are for penalties."

"Most of those who are rehabilitated will not commit another crime whether they are in jail 10 weeks or 10 years," Marsh stated.

State Corrections Commissioner Stewart Werner said although the study "does not portray a bright picture of the effectiveness of institutionalization, it does reassure me that the bureau's growing involvement with community-based corrections is the right way."

Teachers with tenure are still not 'fireproof'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a five-part series on tenure and what it means to teachers and taxpayers.)

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — True or false: Tenure is never having to say you're fired.

About a dozen Monroe County educators feel that the public thinks once tenure is granted, a teacher or principal is invincible.

"I think the general public feels the tenure laws put us in a position where we cannot be fired. That's just not the case," said William E. Shearer, president of the Stroudsburg Area Teachers Assn.

The Pennsylvania School Code lists about a dozen reasons for firing a tenured teacher. Faculty can be fired for immorality, incompetency, intemperance, cruelty, persistent negligence, mental derangement, advocacy of or participating in un-American or subversive doctrine or persistent and wilful violation of state school laws.

Tenured teachers can also be laid off if pupil enrollment drops, the educational program is curtailed or if the district's schools are consolidated.

Local school boards have the power to dismiss as well as hire faculty. But a teacher usually is not fired unless administrators keep anecdotal records of alleged violations.

A hearing before the school board must also be held before the teacher is dismissed, but the faculty member can be suspended with pay until the dismissal.

On the college level, faculty can be dismissed for incompetence, moral turpitude or refusal to perform their duties.

As in public elementary and secondary schools, college faculty can have a formal hearing on campus and be represented by a lawyer.

Shearer said all the administrators have to do to remove a bad teacher is make a case against that teacher.

Samuel O. Wells III, superintendent of the Stroudsburg Area School District, said making a case against a teacher takes much time and effort.

"It hinges upon the willingness of the school system to have anecdotal records of the teacher's inadequacies."

"What the general public doesn't know is when we begin to do a job properly and begin to put the pressure on, the individual will often resign or retire."

He said the tenure law is only as good as the administration and board of education that monitors the staff.

Shearer said in the eight years he has taught in the Stroudsburg school district, he has heard of only five or six non-tenured teachers being dismissed for incompetence.

He said the small number indicates most teachers are competent.

A survey of teacher dismissals done by the Pennsylvania School Boards Assn. seems to prove Shearer's point, but the association is using the survey to prove district administrators are not doing their job of removing bad teachers.

The 1972 survey of Pennsylvania's 505 school districts showed 65 teachers dismissed for all reasons during the past 30 years, while the total tenured population during that period was about 100,000 people.

"I think the unfortunate point in the whole tenure thing," Shearer said, "is school boards do not generally have the manpower to make a good, sound case against a certified teacher."

Wells said it is up to the administration to make a case. "There is no case when a teacher overturned a decision where due process and anecdotal records were followed."

STROUDSBURG — Approximately $4,500 in damages resulted from a two-vehicle accident on I-80 westbound in Stroud Township at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday.

A vehicle driven by William Grover, 46, of Highland Park, N.J. ran off the roadway and struck the left rear of a vehicle parked on the side of the road.

Burglary charged

MOUNT POCONO — The burglary and theft case of Martin G. Gardner of Pittston was bound over to Monroe County Court after a preliminary hearing Monday before District Magistrate Clara Pope.

Gardner was charged with burglary and theft of John Lewis store at Pocono Shopping Center, Pocono Pines May 29. His alleged accomplices, Joseph Moran and Dennis Widdick, both of Pittston, were both bound over to court June 12.

Bail was set at $5,000 for each defendant.

Police divers drydocked

HERSHEY — Pennsylvania State Police diving coordinator Lt. Emil Suchy Tuesday ordered a temporary suspension of all diving activity by the seven state police scuba diving teams throughout the Commonwealth.

The action was taken pending the outcome of an investigation into the death of a 27-year-old trooper while scuba diving in Schuylkill County Monday.

The trooper, Roger Weimer, was stationed at the Reading barracks. There has been no release of the details surrounding his death.

Of the seven teams in the state, area team number two is stationed at the state police barracks at Swiftwater. The state police divers are used for recovering drowning victims and underwater recovering of evidence or lost property.

S-burg douses auto fire

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg firemen responded to a car fire Tuesday at the corner of 7th and Sarah Streets.

Forty-one men with one truck responded to a fire in a car owned by Stephen Paugh of Fort Washington. Chief Thomas Phillips said the fire was caused by a discarded cigarette butt in the backseat of the car.

PUC okays rate hike

Local bus firm ups fares

HARRISBURG — A bus fare increase for two routes run by the Delaware Valley Transportation Co. of Stroudsburg has been approved by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

The fare increases for the East Stroudsburg-Philadelphia and East Stroudsburg-Tobyhanna Army Depot routes were approved Monday and became effective after one day's notice.

For the first time in 14 years, one-way fares on the East Stroudsburg-Philadelphia run will increase from a 35 cents-$5.20 range to a 50 cents-$7.30 range. The route is used mainly by East Stroudsburg State College students on weekends.

One-way fares between East Stroudsburg and the Tobyhanna Army Depot will be raised from the 30 cents-$1.10 range to 65 cents-$1.55 range.

One-way commuter book fares also will increase from a $9-$22 range to a $12-$30.80 range.

The commission originally had suspended the company's rate increase request, filed to become effective March 1 of this year. At that time, the commission said the company had failed to submit the required financial data.

Monroe Arts Council envisions jail gallery

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Arts Council is thinking about putting local artists in the clinic.

County culture coordinator Grant Terrill said Tuesday the council is thinking about acquiring the county jail as a future art museum.

He admitted the idea was a "longshot" and added they were looking for a place for exhibits.

"Eventually they'll have to build a new jail somewhere and we just want to show we have an idea for its use when that does happen," Terrill explained.

The idea to use the jail was suggested to him by steering committee chairman Arthur Mark, Terrill added.

He said the council might also look at some other locations, such as the East Stroudsburg railroad station, where they might be able to have the use of one room.

"We'd like to have a place to display the works of Pocono artists. Then, depending on the budget, we might be able to add more national names, if possible," he said.

BOSTON (UPI) — George Hendrick's second homer of the game, a three-run shot with two out in the ninth, capped a four-run rally Tuesday night that lifted the Cleveland Indians to an 8-6 victory over Boston and dropped the Red Sox out of first place in the American League East.

The loss, coupled with New York's 3-1 triumph over Baltimore, dropped the Red Sox one-half game behind the Yankees in the AL East.

The Red Sox had snapped a 44 tie in the last of the eighth on Carl Yastrzemski's two-run homer, but the Indians chased Bill Lee in the ninth inning when Frank Duffy led off with a single and mounted their winning rally against relievers Roger Moret and Dick Drago.

Moret walked Hal Ashby, and after Duane Kuiper bunted into a forceout, pinch-hitter Boog Powell greeted Drago with a bloop double to left to score Duffy. The Red Sox appeared to be out of trouble, however, when Kuiper was cut down at the plate trying to score on Powell's hit.

Rick Manning, however, coaxed a walk off Drago and Hendrick then sliced a homer inside the rightfield foul pole.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but Boston countered with two runs in the bottom of the inning. Charlie Spikes hit his second homer of the year in the second inning to tie the game, but Boston scored twice more in the third.

Yankees, 3-1

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Terry Whitfield drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly as the New York Yankees whipped the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 Tuesday night for their fourth straight victory in a game marked by a near free-for-all when Thurman Munson threw an eighth-inning punch at pitcher Mike Torrez.

After Ken Singleton led off the game with a homer off Catfish Hunter, the Yankee 11-game winner set the Orioles down on only three other hits.

Munson, who was struck by Torrez' pitch in the second inning, was decked by a high pitch in the sixth inning and when the Yankee catcher came to bat again in the eighth inning he made a charge for the Oriole pitcher after grounding out to third baseman Brooks Robinson. It was Robinson's body block that prevented Munson from reaching Torrez with a wild right hand punch as players from both teams went onto the field.

After being hit by the second inning pitch, Munson scored on singles by Graig Nettles and Whitfield.

Brewers sweep

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — George Scott tied the game with a home run, then broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run bases-filled single in the seventh to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 4-2 win in the second game and a sweep of their Tuesday night doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers.

The Brewers won the first game 5-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Jim Slaton.

Scott hit his 11th homer of the season deep into the left field bleachers to tie the score at 1-1. In the seventh, after Hank Aaron worked relief ace John Hiller for a walk with the bases filled to tie the score at 2-2, Scott singled to score Pedro Garcia and Don Money with the winning runs.

Bill Travers scattered eight hits and walked two to pick up his third straight win.

Phils send Bucs down to double defeat

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Larry Christenson and Tom Underwood, a pair of 21-year-olds, picked up the victories Tuesday night as they hurled the Philadelphia Phillies to a two-night doubleheader sweep of the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-3 and 8-1.

Greg Luzinski singled home two first-inning runs as the Phillies knocked out loser Bruce Kison with four runs and went on to victory behind the five-hit pitching of Underwood, a left-hander, in the nightcap.

Mike Schmidt and Jerry Martin banged out three hits each to lead the first-game assault and Tug McGraw picked up his seventh save. For the second straight time, Kison was knocked out of the game without retiring a man. He walked Dave Cash, Larry Bowa and Jay Johnstone to open the game, then Luzinski singled for two runs. After walking Tommy Hutton, Kison was replaced by Sam McDowell. Richie Hebner booted Mike Schmidt's grounder to let in the third run and Underwood singled to make it 4-0. The Phils added another run when Johnstone singled, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Hutton's single.

Tony Taylor drove in a sixth-inning run with a sacrifice fly and Luzinski singled in an eighth-inning run.

Bob Robertson accounted for Pittsburgh's only run of the second game in the fourth inning with his second homer of the season.

Mets, 5-1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jerry Koosman's five-hit pitching and a two-run homer by Dave Kingman carried the Mets to a 5-1 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night, ending a seven-game New York losing streak.

It was Koosman's 100th career victory and ran his season's record to 6-5. The left-hander walked one and struck out seven in pitching his fifth complete game of the year.

The Mets scored in the first inning off loser John Curtis (4-6) to break a string of 35 consecutive scoreless innings. Gene Clines singled, stole second and, following an infield groundout, scored on Jesus Alou's line drive to left which Lou Brock misplayed for a two-base error.

After Joe Torre led off the fourth inning with a single, Kingman made the score 3-0 by blasting the ball over the rear wall of the St. Louis bullpen 428 feet away for his 10th home run of the season.

Reds, 3-0

ATLANTA (UPI) — Joe Morgan's three-run homer in the third inning Tuesday night was the difference as the Cincinnati Reds scored a 3-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Pat Darcy, 2-4, and Phil Niekro, 7-6, both allowed only four hits before being replaced by late-inning relievers. But Morgan's 10th homer of the year, a smash high into the rightfield seats, came with two on and two out after Niekro had walked Bill Plummer and Pete Rose and furnished the only runs in the game.

Left-hander Randy Jones went the distance for the Padres, although giving up 11 hits, to win his 10th game in 14 decisions. One of them was Bobby Murcer's ninth homer of the year in the sixth inning that tied the score at 1-1.

Arnie visits Stroudsburg

If you thought you saw Arnold Palmer standing around Main Street Monday morning, your eyes probably weren't playing tricks on you.

Palmer made a brief visit to Stroudsburg Monday to attend memorial services for his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Walzer, formerly of Shawnee, who died in Florida last week.

Although funeral services were held in Orlando, a memorial service was held at the Stroudsburg Methodist Church for relatives and friends from Pennsylvania.

Palmer arrived for the service around 10:30 a.m. and left immediately afterwards at noon to catch a flight from ABE Airport in Allentown for Michigan, where he was scheduled to play an exhibition.

Odum adds another title

Wrestler Dan Odum of Pocono Mountain High School was named the outstanding wrestler in the recent Abington Heights Takedown tournament.

Odum successfully defended his 130-pound title and earned the outstanding wrestler honor for the second consecutive year.

In four matches during the double elimination tournament, Odum compiled 21 takedowns and was taken down by his opponents only once.

Odum blanked Steve Slover of Meyers High School in the opening round 7-0 and knocked off Larry Forniconi of Keystone, 4-0 in his second round bout.

Odum clinched the 130-pound championship by downing Gary Mandover of Mountainview by scores of 4-1 and 7-0.

Vintage Cavalier cagers

Four East Stroudsburg High School basketball teams from the past recently aroused the interest of East Penn League statistician Joe Blankowitsch of Freedom High School in Bethlehem.

Blankowitsch, who is working on a 50-year history of the East Penn League, was baffled by the records compiled by the Cavaliers from 1931-32 through 1934-35 during which time East Stroudsburg was a member of the league.

A check of the Record's files showed those years did not produce any particularly outstanding Cavalier teams.

The best record over the four-year period in question was a 6-4 league mark compiled by the 1931-32 squad coached by Earl Mosier.

The Cavaliers dipped to 6-8 in 1932-33 and 3-11 in 1933-34, although during the latter season they were credited with one more victory when the PIAA forced Hazleton to forfeit eight games because it used a player named Patsy DeVecca, who according to accounts "was older than the 20 years of age permitted by league rules."

In 1934-35 East Stroudsburg hit rock bottom with an 0-14 record. Ironically, that was the same season arch-rivals Stroudsburg had its finest season.

The Mountaineers, coached by T. Manning "Cap" Curtis, defeated Palmerton 23-14 for the Lehigh Valley League title behind the iron-man five play of Bill Evans, Chet Gross, Warren Loney, Jim Somers, and Bill Melick.

Sportsmen want salmon

The Blue Mountain Rod and Gun Club of East Bangor is currently asking area sports clubs to urge the Pennsylvania State Commission to stock Coho salmon eggs in the Delaware River.

Salmon were stocked in the Delaware about seven or eight years ago, but fishermen soon discovered the eggs had to be stocked for the fish to return year after year.

Interested members of other rod and gun clubs should contact president Alvin Messinger at 215-588-1790.

Boxing at Monticello

If you like to watch two sports at once, Monticello Raceway is the place to head next Monday night.

Monticello will offer a full-card of racing and a triple-header boxing show over closed circuit television all for the regular track admission price of $2.50.

The boxing show will feature the Carlos Monzon-Tony Licata, Victor Galindez-Jorge Ahumada, and Muhammed Ali-Joe Bugner bouts.

Like to house a player?

About 25 soccer players from the Menningen, Germany team will be arriving in the Poconos August 3 for an exhibition against the Pocono Snow Soccer Club.

The players are hoping to stay with area residents during the three days (August 3, 4, and 5) they are here. Any one who would like to house a player can contact Tom McCartney at 421-5791 for further information.

Lou Graham's lucky colors came through in the clutch

MEDINAH, Ill. (UPI) — Lou Graham has only one superstition, he said, but after his victory in the U.S. Open golf championship, he might develop another.

The superstition is the dark blue knit shirt and the light blue knit slacks he wore in downing John Mahaffey by two strokes, a par 71 to a 73, in the 26th playoff in 75 open years to win the crown.

"Does it look washed out?" Graham joshed after his triumph. "I've worn it quite a few times, and I've shot a lot of good scores with it on. I wore it Saturday when I shot a 68, I wore it last week when I had a good round. I wore it in the Kemper when I shot a 67.

"I thought about wearing it every round of the Open. My wife asked me Saturday why I didn't save it for Sunday, and I told her 'No, we need to do some moving here."

"Monday, I looked down at the outfit somewhere on the back nine, and I said, come on, boy, you gotta go.

"This is the first year I can recall wearing this combination of colors and having a good round."

"Any other superstitions?" he was asked. "No," he replied flatly.

How about washing that combination of clothing now? No, sir. "I'm going to take it in to be dry cleaned," he said.

Graham, who earlier had decided not to play in the Western Open this week, left instead for his Nashville, Tenn., home last night, and said, "I hope to get in a couple of days of fishing. I never catch anything, but I sure teach those worms to swim."

"I like to fish. I like nice looking women. I like my wife. I like to shoot pool. I have a pool table in my house, and I'm not good. My brothers all beat me. I consider myself a conservative, not really flashy."

"I have to wear clothes that look like Lou Graham. If I dressed flashy, I'd think people were looking at me, and saying 'Who is that idiot?' I have to be

America's second ranked player bows in straight sets

Unseeded South African stuns Smith

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Stan Smith, the 1972 champion and second ranked player in the United States, suffered one of the worst defeats of his career Tuesday when he was swept out of the first round of the Wimbledon tennis championships in a 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 setback by South Africa's unseeded Byron Bertram.

Smith, seeded seventh, has experienced a poor season this year but it reached its low point on the All-England club's No.3 court just before dusk. Bertram, a former Wimbledon junior champion but ranked only sixth in South Africa, easily put the 6-foot, 4-inch Smith from Sea Pines, S.C., on the sidelines to join fellow American Vilas Garulatis as the only two seeds to lose their first round matches.

Arthur Ashe and Ken Rose-wall, two veteran campaigners who have never managed to equal Smith's achievement at Wimbledon, earlier began what could be their final major effort at the $268,600 tournament with uninspired first round wins.

Ashe downed Bob Hewitt of South Africa 7-5, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, and Rosewall dumped Corrado Barazzutti, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

There were no upsets among the women's first round matches with top seed Chris Evert demolishing Chris O'Neil of Australia 6-2, 6-0 in just 40 minutes on center court, while Billie Jean King, the No.3 seed, found no trouble with her South African opponent Elizabeth Vitolman in a 6-1, 6-4 decision.

Sixteen out of 31 American entries made it through the first round. The women's first round will be completed to day.

Smith was just the shell of the player who defeated Ilie Nastase three years ago to take the title in a five-set epic final. The outcome was apparent in only the third game when the 22-year-old Bertram broke Smith's service, normally one of Stan's major weapons on the fast grass.

"He just played really well," said Smith of Bertram's display. The South African's service returns, particularly on the backhand, were devastating and enabled him to break through at will, Smith only winning his service three times.

When on the receiving end, Smith's baseline game was erratic and he consequently never built up the confidence to rush the net where his game is usually stronger.

"It is the best I have ever played in my entire life," said Bertram, who has only played eight tournaments this year following an operation on his serving arm. "Everything I hit seemed to come off. It was one of those freak matches when everything goes well."

Ashe, 32 next month, came from 2-5 behind in the opening set to win 7-5 before bad light halted play Monday. When they resumed, Hewitt, better known for his doubles play, again found the handle quicker than Ashe, evening the match by breaking through 5-3 and then holding his serve.

The shirtless center court spectators, part of the 28,000 who flocked to the All-England club on the second day of the championships, had little to applaud for the rest of the match. Hewitt committed a total of 16 doublefaults, the last coming at match point.

Ashe was happy with his game and the bookmakers, allowed into the club grounds for the first time this year, kept him at second favorite despite his sixth seeding. On determination alone, Ashe justified them.

Other men's seeds safely through the opening round included Australia's John Alexander, the No.14, who downed Jun Kuki of Japan 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, and Guillermo Vilas, the 4th seeded Argentine, who ousted Russell Simpson of New Zealand 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 in a match begun Monday and halted by darkness.

Miss Evert's major rival for the title, second seed Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, made harder work of her first round opponent, Australian Wendy Turnbull, although she won in straight sets, 6-2, 8-6.

The chunky 140-pound Czech, losing finalist in the Australian, Italian and French championships, dazzled Miss Turnbull in the opening set with the full range of her power and placements.

But in the second, the 18-year-old Miss Navratilova lost her concentration and found herself serving to save the set at 5-6. She succeeded and then broke Miss Turnbull's service with the help of the Australian's 10th doublefault and served out the match.

The American men had a good day with Sherwood Stewart of Baytown, Tex., winning a battle of big servers 6-2, 6-4, 7-5 against West German Karl Meier. Raz Reid of Greenville, S.C., put out Frew McMillan, Hewitt's South African doubles partner, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, Sandy Mayer of Wayne, N.J., dumped Australian Alvin Gardiner, 6-3, 6-1, 6-0 and Charlie Owens of Tuscaloosa, Ala., topped Belgian Bernard Mignot 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Ali reconsiders plans to retire

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali said Tuesday he was having second thoughts now about retiring after his July 1 title fight with Joe Bugner but told reporters "you can't go on forever."

Ali, 33, and the blond, blue-eyed Hungarian-born challenger took the day off, with the exception of road work and mid-morning physical examinations at which doctors found them perfectly fit for their fight next week.

The two boxers wound up the day at a buffet dinner sponsored by one of the local promoters of the fight, matchmaker Mike Ong of "Showbiz International." They exchanged barbs and squared off against each other for the benefit of photographers, while in the background a combo played tunes from the 1960s.

Earlier, at an afternoon news conference, Ali said he "sincerely" wanted to follow through with his vow to retire after the Bugner fight, but he said he had received a number of cables urging that he first give Smokin' Joe Frazier, the former champion, a rematch.

"This is why I'm making my (final) announcement just before the fight," Ali told reporters at his plush Hilton hotel headquarters. "I'm still thinking. I sincerely want to quit. I mean you gotta quit. Let's face it: I know I'm great and all that, but you can't go on forever."

NCAA golfers tee off today

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Wake Forest coach Jesse Haddock doesn't agree with those who see the 78th NCAA Golf Championship as a two-team showdown between his defending champion Deacons and 1974 runnerup Florida.

"That's just the way it was last year, and both teams are pretty much the same," said the personable Deacons coach, "but on this course, which I consider a real championship course, there are at least eight teams who can win."

Haddock said he likes the chances of Big Ten champion Indiana, because of the Hoosiers' familiarity with the 7,000-yard, par-72 Ohio State University Scarlet course and their Midwestern location with conditions similar to those they will encounter when the four-day event starts today.

Haddock also ticked off the names of Southern California, Houston, Oklahoma State, Texas, Georgia Southern, Brigham Young and Alabama, admitting he probably missed others. He said he felt there were probably 20 players who could seriously challenge Wake's Curtis Strange, defending medalist in the event.

Among those given the best chance to unsettle Strange, one of four Walker Cup players in the tournament, are Alabama's Jerry Pate, the defending United States amateur champion; Southern Cal's Craig Stadler, the 1973 amateur champ; Florida's Andy Bean and Phil Hancock; Jame Gonzales of Oklahoma State; and Jay Haas, a teammate of Strange.

This year is the sixth Ohio State has hosted the championships. The last was in 1970 when Houston, led by John Mahaffey, edged out Wake Forest, paced by Lanny Wadkins.

"I'd say this field is slightly better than 1970," said Haddock.

Authority won't buy debt-ridden Penguins

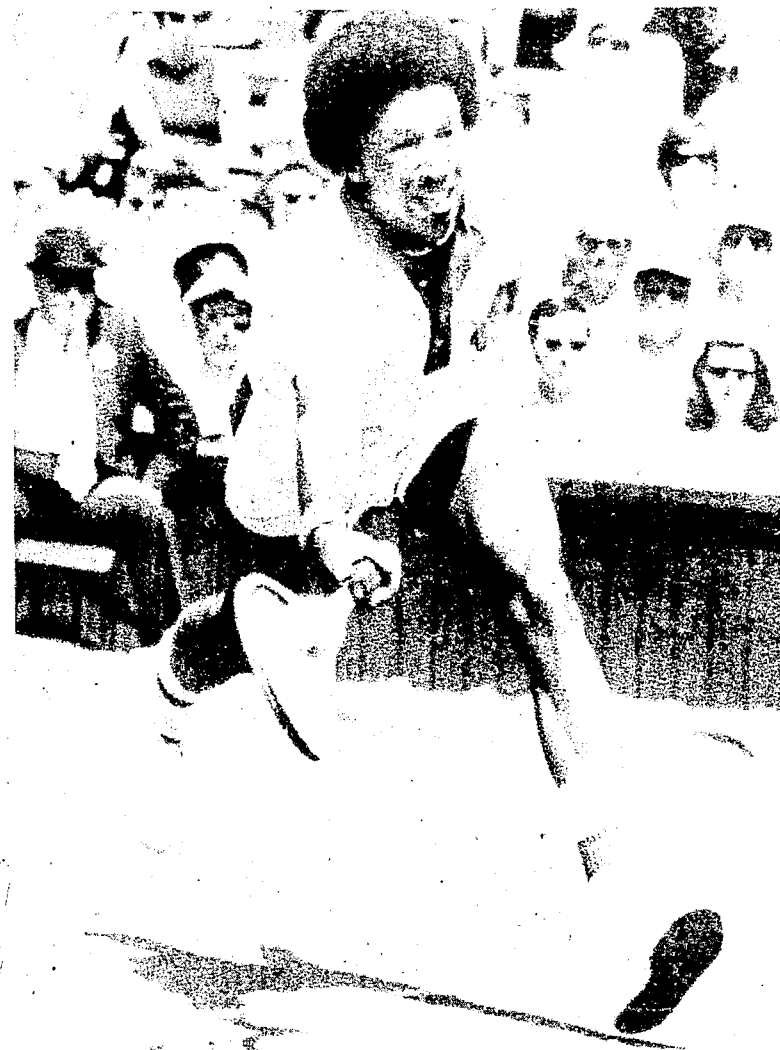

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Allegheny County Commissioner Leonard C. Staisey Tuesday rejected a suggestion that the Public Auditorium Authority take over the destitute Pittsburgh Penguins.

James Flaherty, brother of the city's mayor and a member of the auditorium authority, had asked the authority to study the possibility of buying the Penguins to protect its own financial interests.

Staisey said he didn't think the authority was authorized to make such an acquisition and said he opposed the idea, anyhow.

The authority, co-sponsored by the city and Allegheny County, operates the Civic Arena, home ice for the Pens. The National Hockey League club generates about 33 per cent of the attendance at the arena and about 25 per cent of the revenues needed for the authority's annual budget.

Flaherty, a Democratic candidate for county commissioner, suggested the authority

Arms buildup feared in Marianas-U.S. relationship

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Strengthening the union between the Marianas, a trust territory in the Pacific, and the United States is either a moral obligation or a threat to stability, depending on who's doing the talking.

According to F. Hayden Williams, ambassador to the island territories, converting the Marianas to political union with the United States could be of benefit to U.S. image in Asia.

But the United Methodist Church, is one organization claiming that the real U.S. aim for the Marianas is military, and a union could lead to a Pacific arms buildup.

Ambassador Williams negotiated a pact that could lead to political union between the United States and Marianas Islands, and the islanders voted overwhelmingly last week to accept its terms.

Saipan is the largest of the 14-island chain, which swings north of Guam. Exactly 31 years before the plebiscite, U.S. marines stormed ashore to reclaim the island from Japanese invaders.

"We think these islands are important to us and to peace and stability in the Pacific area," Williams said in an interview in his Interior Department office.

The islands are administered now as a trust territory, turned over to the care of the United States by the United Nations following World War II.

While Guam is owned outright by the United States, the Marianas, to the north, and the Carolines and the Marshall islands in an east-west direction from Guam are the trust territories.

Williams says the way the United States handles its relationship with the Marianas will have an impact on the U.S. relationship with the rest of the trust territories and with the rest of Asia.

"We're going to be in a fishbowl," he said.

Williams said the plebiscite "truly represents an honest effort on their part to choose their own future."

At the same time, the agreement represents a start toward fulfilling a "moral obligation" to the islands because the United States had held out hope they could become a part of the United States, Williams said.

Others see the acquisition as a threat to world peace.

"The professed aim of the United States is to acquire a permanent military outpost that will allow strategic control over the Pacific area," according to the United Methodist board of global ministries. "The ultimate result may be the intensification of an already critically dangerous arms race."

Williams agreed that U. S. presence "does have some political military significance, there's no question about that."

He negotiated, for example, for about one third of the island of Tinian for the military "for contingency purposes," although some of it will be leased back.

The agreement also gives the U. S. Pacific Fleet an island for aerial bombardment and ship to shore target practice. Still another portion of the island network will be reserved for amphibious exercises to keep the fleet forces in readiness.

Kremlin's guessing game

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

A jovial and apparently healthy Leonid I. Brezhnev has given Kremlinologists something new to add to their guessing games.

Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader, emerged from his second prolonged absence in the last year to vote in nationwide elections for local and regional parliaments. He looked tanned and rested and jokingly pointed to his bushy black eyebrows to identify himself for election officials instead of producing the usual documents.

Questioned about his health, he told newsmen:

"You can surely see that I am good."

Nor did the schedule he outlined for himself in coming months bear much resemblance to the man who as late as last April was being written off for health reasons as being unlikely to make it beyond the 25th party congress next February, if he could last that long.

The combination of Brezhnev's reappearance in public, the election and the scheduled order of coming events did, however, give the Kremlinologists a certain reward.

The election appeared to reaffirm without any doubt Brezhnev's standing as first among equals in the Soviet hierarchy.

This conclusion was reached by a simple matter of arithmetic, adding up the number of nominations to the Russian Republic's supreme Soviet received by various members of the Politburo, the highest policy making body of the Communist party.

Brezhnev outdistanced the runners-up, President Nikolai Podgorniy and Premier Alexei Kosygin, by two-to-one.

Alexander Shelepin, removed from the Politburo last April after once being considered a rival to Brezhnev, received no nominations at all.

Although Kremlin proceedings are secret, Shelepin was considered an opponent to Brezhnev's policy of detente.

The schedule of events illustrated clearly that European security and detente remained the twin foundation stones of Brezhnev policy, with the question of European security, for the moment at least, taking priority.

Brezhnev continued to predict an early date for the summit meeting which will mark final agreement among the 35 nations taking part in the European security talks.

While saying he still intended to meet with President Ford this year, he said the meeting now would not take place until after formal conclusion of the security talks. The Ford meeting already has been postponed once.

A similar disclosure came from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger who gave a different reason. He said the meeting would depend upon progress in Soviet-U.S. arms limitation talks. The Soviet leader, he said, wanted to "mark his visit with some significant result."

As for Brezhnev's own future, the Kremlinologists have been speculating that he hopes to climax his career with the twin successes of the European Security conference and the arms talks with the U.S. Then, so the speculation goes, he might become the first Soviet leader to retire of his own volition.

Ann Landers

Hints for kids

Dear Ann Landers: You have, in the past, printed some very useful suggestions and guidelines sent in by readers. As Superintendent of the Allegheny County Police, I would like to share with you some literature put out by the Boys and Girls Crime Prevention Corps. We hope young people everywhere will profit from these rules:

1. Keep out of wooded areas, empty lots and empty buildings.

2. Do not talk with strangers or get into a car driven by a person you don't know.

3. Never thumb rides.

4. Don't permit anyone you don't know to touch or handle you.

5. Turn down any offer by a stranger who asks you to sell things or pass things out.

6. Do not take candy or money from strangers.

7. Keep away from strangers who get friendly in a movie, park, swimming pool or other public place.

8. Never eat anything or puff on anything given to you by a stranger.

If someone should grab hold of you, do the following:

1. Scream as loud as you can. Keep screaming. Don't stop.

2. Jerk free and run as fast as you can.

3. Run to the nearest home or building and tell the first person you see what happened.

4. Call the police and your parents. Remain there until someone comes for you.

5. Try to remember the description of the person who bothered you.

Robert G. Kroner, Supt., Allegheny County Police, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Friend: Thanks for the expert advice. I hope parents everywhere will go over your suggestions with their children and re-emphasize the importance of each one. It could mean the difference between life and death.

Dear Ann: I've heard of married men who lie and say they are single. But what about a single man who lies and says he is married?

I've been seeing Dick for six months. He has promised to marry me as soon as he is able to get a divorce. I learned today that he isn't married.

What do you make of it? I'm

Zonked

Dear Z.: Wake up and smell the coffee, honey. He's a liar — out for whatever he can get. And if, after you read this, he gets anything more than a Methodist handshake and a swift farewell, you have oatmeal where your brains belong.

Dear Ann Landers: I need help with a problem concerning my intimate life. I'm 24, female and have trouble with men. To be honest with you, Ann, I can't stand them. When it comes to sex, men turn me off — completely. I haven't expressed my feelings to anyone because I'm sure they'd think I was a lesbian. I have never had sexual relations with anyone, although I am strongly attracted to certain women I know.

Could this be a passing phase? Is it possible that I can somehow learn to like men? Believe me, I've tried — but they leave me cold. What do you make of this? My future depends on your answer.

Very Anonymous

Dear V.A.: If you are 24, "can't stand men" and are "strongly attracted" to certain women you know, I can tell you it's no "passing phase."

I urge you to get counseling. You need a great deal more help than I can give you in a single letter. That help is tied in with the answers to many questions a counselor would ask. Get moving.

Dear Ann Landers: I am an 18-year-old boy with a problem who is 16. Her name is not Kathy but I will call her that. Actually the problem is the girl's mother.

Kathy works part-time and makes $40 a week. She hands over nearly every dime to her mother who is supposed to be saving it for her, but I suspect she may be spending it.

Kathy and I got pre-engaged a few months ago. Everything was fine until last week when I told Kathy I would like to progress from the pre-engaged state to the engaged state. Her mother blew her lid.

Don't you think a girl of 16 is old enough to make such a decision on her own? I think Kathy's mother is running her life and I told her so.

I am in the U.S. Air Force and plan to stay in it. I'm willing to wait two years before we get married. Kathy's family says it is not fair for a girl to be tied up to one guy while she is still in high school. What do you say?

Peace Is Our Profession

Dear Peace: I say Kathy's family is right and I hope she listens to them. If your love is real, it will withstand the test of time — and dates with other young men, which I hope she will accept.

Kathy is like a worm in the jar of horseradish. She thinks it's the sweetest place in the world because it's the only place she's ever been.

Are drugs O.K. if you learn how to control them? Can they be of help? The answers are in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope On Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (20 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Punishing kids

I have always admired mothers who can reach out, give their kid a belt or a thump and that's it. The punishment for the misdeed is done.

I use visuals. Me.

When a child comes in late, I refuse to shout or scream about it. Instead, the next morning I will drag out to the kitchen looking like an avocado that has gone bad and say, "Go ahead. Kill your mother. Do I ask a lot? Eighteen hours of sleep a day. That's all I ask. But you — Mr. Night Vision. You run around like a hamster."

"Mom! Why don't you go to bed?"

"Did you hear that?" I asked the refrigerator. "Go to bed, he says. Why, I'd just have to get up when the policeman came to tell me you're in a ditch somewhere."

"MOM . . ."

"Put me out of your mind," I said. "But when I fall asleep in the dentist's chair, just tell yourself, 'I did that to Mom!'"

Some parents say visuals don't work as disciplinary measures. They say they're too subtle and too dramatic, but I have a few grabbers that have been effective.

Once when my daughter gave a party and didn't clean up, I was doing dishes at four in the morning. I know she felt rotten, even as she slept through it.

Probably my finest hour came last week when one son dropped me off at the beauty shop with instructions to "Call when they're finished with the estimate."

I called several times and no one answered. "I'll just have to punish him," I said and began the three-mile trip home by foot in the hot, blazing sun.

Forty-five minutes later I stood before him, hair styled like a Brillo pad, face red as a beet, breathing irregular, white anklets dusty from the walk. He was connected to his stereo with a pair of earphones.

"I know this is more punishment than a child should bear but I had to do it to you," I said gasping for breath, "to teach you a lesson."

He slid off the earphones. "I can't hear you with these earphones on."

"You're just going to have to live with your own guilt," I said, "and remember me as I stand before you . . . weak . . . but brave on the brink of a coronary."

"Does that mean you won't get to the store?" he asked.

Did I tell you he'd feel rotten?

Broke up

By Jean Adams

IF: (Q.) What would you do if you were going steady with a guy who was 18 and you would soon be 17. And he was a senior and you were a junior. And you had been going steady for about four months. And until this last month you hadn't argued at all and then all of a sudden you started arguing, because he wanted to be with you all the time every day. And you told him there was no earthly way because you have other things to do and other friends to be with. That you couldn't be with him all the time.

So he got mad. Then you both patched everything up and tried to start all over again. Then he started talking about marriage after you got out of school. So you told him that you weren't even thinking about marriage yet — all you were thinking about was being with someone you cared about and wanted to go places with! So he got mad again but this time he broke up and gave you your bracelet back and you gave him his ring back, and both of you said you would still be good friends.

Was that the best thing to do between us?

Mixed Up in Ohio

(A.) I get many letters like yours, but few so clearly and simply told.

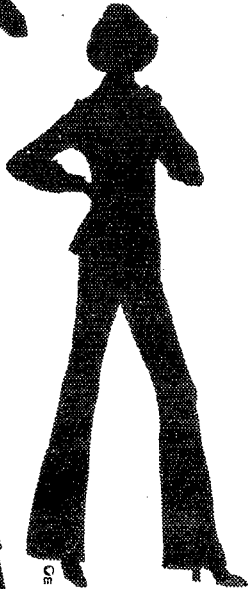

It seems to me that you two have worked out your problem in the best possible way considering all the facts.

The boy was too intense. You were not ready to meet him on his all-or-nothing terms. It would not have been fair to him or to yourself to have tried to hang onto him.

It is good that you decided to remain friends. Perhaps in time his attitude will change or your attitude will change and you will be able to be more comfortable with each other. Or perhaps each of you can find someone else you can be more comfortable with. I think that second possibility is the better way to go.

Survey disproves that college teachers are overpaid

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Education Editor
Many parents of college students at lunch munch peanut butter and jelly sandwiches in offices, stores and factories all over America to save money for school bills.
They get their shoes half-soled and cut other corners—so Rollo or Esmerelda can get a sheepskin.
Considering the size of the annual college bill—up to $6,000 or more—it's fair to ask:

"Are college teachers paid too much?"
Answer: The cost of living rose 11.1 per cent in 1974. The average faculty salary—from instructor to professor—went up 5.8 per cent.
When you add fringe benefits, college teachers' total pay on the average increased 6.4 per cent, leaving a good-sized gap when figured against inflation.
The survey by the American Association of University Professors' Salary Study Committee shows also that women teachers in higher education received 17.5 per cent less in their paychecks than their male counterparts.

Some highlights of the survey covering 275,000 college teachers:
—The average salary of all faculty members is $16,320. Fringe benefits such as pension contributions and insurance bring total compensation up to $18,580. Remember that this is an average. Many teachers make much more. Many make much less.

—Schools that pay in the lower ranges employ more women teachers. For example, in two-year private colleges (lowest average compensation) and church-related schools women make up 40 to 60 per cent of the staff.
—Across the board, women tend to fill out the lower ranks. Only 12 per cent of the female teachers are professors. Thirty one per cent of the college teacher men are in that bracket. Twenty-three per cent of the women are instructors (lowest faculty rank). Seven per cent of the men hold that rank.

There are four categories of colleges, according to the association's rating scales.
In category one, the university level (schools that offer all degrees, including doctorate), the range for a professor is from $22,520 to $31,970; associate professor, from $17,790 to $23,080; assistant professor, $14,800 to $17,500; instructor, from $11,390 to $14,160.

In category two, college level (bachelor's and master's degrees but no doctorate), professor, from $16,200 to $28,330; associate professor, from $13,720 to $22,610; assistant professor, from $11,940 to $18,560; instructor, from $10,090 to $15,520.

In category four, institutions without ranks, the teaching positions pay from $12,090 to $21,140.
The compilation of salary scales at more than 1,500 institutions also included a look at institutions where the average faculty salary exceeds $21,500.
At the top of the list is the City University of New York, City College, $27,931. Next is Hebrew Union College, $27,765, followed by the California Institute of Technology, $27,310. Harvard University, $26,824, is fourth.

Yale's average, $22,582, is above Princeton's, $22,241.
It is interesting that the school with the highest average salary is a no tuition, open admissions school—one of the many in the free university system financed by the City of New York.

Another book freak bites dust

By THOMAS P. BROOKS JR.
DALLAS (UPI) — Book lovers have been seeking out Loyd (cq) Harper and his dishevelled used book store in the raunchy "Deep Elm" portion of downtown Dallas for 27 years. Harper's loved every minute of it—or almost every minute.
But late this summer or early in the fall, Harper will close the doors of Harper's Book Store for good.

The closing will end an educational experience for Harper among the thousands of dusty books, magazines and comic books piled on the floor and on unfinished wood shelves.
For a devoted string of customers, including comic book freaks, collectors, writers and other used book dealers, it means one less outlet in which to browse for part of their lifeblood.

"I've learned more right here in this book shop than I ever did in Rusk College, Burleson College or Baylor University," said Harper, 74, leaning against a row of used paperbacks he is selling at half price to move quickly.

His favorite memories of the shop are of the people he has met. His top favorites are what he calls "tough individualists."
"I think there are still people like that. They wouldn't compromise with their dad. They don't sugar coat anything. I'd like to think there is a little bit of that in me."

"We all have our peculiarities and these are the things that have intrigued me down through life. Each person has a story they can tell you. I don't sit down and quiz them on it, it sometimes just comes out."

Harper opened his store after a doctor told him he had to completely change his lifestyle if he wanted to live. He had already suffered two nervous breakdowns and had a variety of jobs, including preaching, missionary work, selling insurance and working on a small newspaper.

He and his late wife began selling books in the back of a junk store on a $50 stake given them by a friend.

Harper said his location in Deep Elm (pronounced Ellum by those who knew it in wilder days when it was a roaming place for pimps and prostitutes) has not been a hindrance. Deep Elm is milder now and pawn shops, with hubcaps nailed to storefronts and guitars, radios and guns hanging in the windows, occupy most of the space around Harper's.

His store is drab and hot during the summer, with old neon lights flickering on and off inside over the heads of browsers. A white metal sign hanging over the sidewalk says it's Harper's Book Store, but a red soft drink emblem on the same sign comes close to stealing the humble show.

"I don't depend on the people that walk along here. My customers seek me out and they come from all over. My best advertising is word of mouth. I've had people come in here from South America who were told about my shop."

He has been attacked once. His assailant, who said he wanted to buy an encyclopedia, caught him between two rows of shelves, smashed him in the head several times with a hammer and nearly killed him. The assailant ran before he finished wrenching Harper's billfold from his pocket.

Harper said he wants to travel more and run a business from his home. His line will be old postcards, antiques and nostalgia items for customers who will seek him out. He said he will regret leaving the store, but thinks he has a chance to get out now and wants to take advantage of it. He plans to leave late this summer if most of his stock is sold.

Financing conventions tough under law

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The new election spending law is giving the Democratic and Republican parties major headaches over the financing of national political conventions next summer.

The law limits convention spending to $2 million, to be paid for from federal funds. The Democrats and Republicans say that may not be enough.

The 1972 conventions cost the major parties about $1.7 million each and inflation could easily put that figure over the $2 million mark, they argue. But the real problem comes if the parties have to count as part of their expenses all the free services they get from the host community of the convention.

The parties say the cost of such "inducements" is substantial. Some believe the total would run close to $3 million if they had to be counted.

This is one of the problems now being tackled by the Federal Election Commission, which was created by the new law to police campaign spending by candidates and parties in the post Watergate era.

The convention problem is number one on the FEC's agenda for a ruling, and it hopes to decide by July 1. Recently the FEC advertised for interested parties to comment on the problem within 10 days before a ruling.

The panel is also tackling a wide range of other problems created by the new law, including:

—Does a routine newsletter sent to constituents by a Congressman or Senator constitute a campaign expense if he's running for re-election at the same time?

—Do the financial expenses involved in preparing a nationally televised fund-raising telethon, such as the one now being planned by the Democrats, constitute expenditures under the new law?

—Does money raised to pay off debts for campaigns before the new law was passed constitute fund raising under the new law and thus be deducted from the amount the candidate can raise for his new campaign?

The convention problem is the most vexing. The donated services vary widely.

It might be an easier decision if it just included such items that both parties receive free such as a fleet of rental cars, a group of hotel rooms for party staff, and generous "hospitality," meaning food and drink.

But the donated items in a convention also include such very expensive items as the extra police force needed to handle a large crowd and occasional demonstrations. Then there is the donated cost of the convention hall itself, air conditioning, janitorial services, lighting, a loud speaker system, and the camera stands built for the news media.

The Democratic and Republican parties have written the FEC requesting that such items not be counted within the $2 million limit. They argue that these are the "commonly offered inducements a chamber of commerce would offer to the American Legion or any other large group to attract a convention to their city."

Without exempting the cost of such inducements, it would be difficult to keep convention costs under $2 million.

Ford's fund-raiser honest

By United Press International
"Hi, I'm Bo Callaway," the secretary of the Army is given to saying in the classical style of the Southern politician.

When he was in Congress he voted against civil rights legislation, but he is given high marks for his efforts to improve race relations in the Army.

He is wealthy but brags about the cold night he spent with troops on maneuvers in Germany. "A whole day in the field and I didn't even see one O6 (a colonel)," he told an interviewer afterward. "That's progress."

Wednesday, when he accepted the job of managing Gerald R. Ford's campaign to win the presidency in his own right in 1976, Callaway said, "I will be totally committed to running an open-handed and straightforward campaign." Those who know him say he means what he promises.

Howard Hollis Callaway was born April 2, 1927, a member of the family that set up the Callaway Mills industrial empire. He went to West Point and served in the Army in Korea.

He was elected to Congress in 1964, and in 1966 got more votes for governor of Georgia than his Democratic opponent, Lester Maddox. But neither had 50 per cent of the vote and a legislature controlled by Democrats gave Maddox the election.

Callaway managed Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign in the South in 1968. He was sworn in as Army secretary on May 15, 1973.

As secretary, Callaway made 55 trips to the Army's scattered bases and outposts, asking questions of soldiers and selling the Army as a way of life. He took seriously the comment of a young officer at Ft. Campbell, Ky., who said, "We've got to do more to show the Army cares about its men."

Callaway has been fighting for the all-volunteer Army all along. He instituted a "glad to have you" approach, designed to convince first-hitch soldiers to re-enlist.

Late last year, Callaway found the Army was recruiting more black soldiers than their percentage in the population. He handled the problem typically: invited members of the Congressional Black Caucus and others to tell them he wanted to slow up the trend, saying that in case of war, blacks would take an unfair share of the combat duty and the casualties.

Callaway started sending more Army recruiters to the suburbs and stepping up officer training programs for black soldiers. The declining economy helped solve his problem, as more whites became interested in the Army as unemployment rose.

Callaway's term has not been all easy. In one of his toughest decisions, he cut in half the court-martial sentence of one of his former constituents: former Lt. William L. Calley, convicted for killing at least 22 Vietnamese civilians, and rode out the resulting criticism.

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Robin Moore, whose best-sellers range from Green Berets to happy hookers, next will chronicle Geraldine Palmer, who runs Le Jungle, top singles club chain; book will dissect that trendy movement ... Abe Hirschfeld, self-appointed and disappointed Senatorial wishful — he got rich building garages — says he snooted an offer to build in Iran but will accept one from the Israeli gov't ... Johnny Mathis will be this year's 4th of July catnip for Princess Grace and Rainier's big American Independence gala at the Sporting Club in Monaco; Johnny will singalong with the U.S. 6th Fleet Orchestra, all for the benefit of the American Hospital in Paris ... Pitcher Nolan Ryan didn't survive the "cover jinx" after Newsweek and Sports Illustrated splashed him, the Yanks buried him.

The panicking N.Y. cops' and firemen's union bosses libeling New York as "Fear City" as desperate last ditchery didn't mention, if it is Fear City (and it's not!), it happened when they were under full deployment to allay those fears ... As for the doctors' strike, couldn't they be sued by any patient thus so coldly neglected — for the same "malpractice"? The doctors deserve a lot less than exorbitant insurance premiums but any mass neglect of their sworn dedication boils down essentially to money, a massive mistake in their public relations ... We're comforted that none of our doctors neglected any patient and stuck by their Hippocratic oaths.

The sad news about Ozzie Nelson was expected but no less mournful, and we send our deepest sympathies to Harriet, David and Rick Nelson ... Even as we were reading the deservedly laudatory obituaries of this fine, warm, respectful gentleman, and it's proof that he'd been a fine citizen from his earliest New Jersey boyhood including his attaining Eagle Scout status at the age of 13 — youngest Boy Scout ever to make that splendid success — we heard a nice story about the sons of one of our family's doctors, gynecologist Frank Ryan, who left Ireland and later an English practice to become one of Manhattan's finest ... His sons Francis Gill Ryan and John S.B. Ryan will be given their Eagle Scout awards July 2 at the Alpine Community House, Alpine, N.J. ... Brothers attaining this high Boy Scout honor is nice news in itself, but their doctor-dad beat them to it by one ocean and a generation gap: Frank Ryan won the British duplicate of Eagle Scout in his teenage, "King Scout," memorable in that Frank received his personally from King George VI; ergo, this emeritus King Scout will make the presentation to his sons July 2 and, if he suddenly breaks up at the moment of presentation, it's because the imminent Eagles will greet him with their home-nickname "Big Bird."

The writers of a top Bdwy. musical will get clobbered momentarily by the Dramatists Guild — for breaking the playwright royalty-rules: they're taking a percentage of the profits instead of the gross ... Gloria Swanson's worried about her property in Calares where the Commie-domination of Portugal has its vengeful eye on foreign properties. American-owned most eagerly ... Charles Bronson's smug chortle may have been caused by Tenn. Wms. offering him the role in his upcoming Bdwy. play first — before Tony Quinn grabbed it ... Celeste Holm's cookbook gets a neat title: Holm on the Range ... Neil Simon wants Truman Capote for a role in the mystery comedy he's writing for Ray Stark.

The delightful Bdwy. revue "Rodgers & Hart" will be a TV special taped after the Bdwy. run ends which we trust will be a long time from now ... The Dionne Warwick-Bill Elliott split came coincidentally as her pet songsmiths Burt Bacharach and his longplay lyricist Hal David ended their estrangement ... Reversing a Trend: The TV Emmy-winning "Love Among the Ruins" starring Katharine Hepburn and Sir Larry Oliver will be distributed abroad by Paramount as a major movie.

John Gielgud won't come to Bdwy. with his much-praised Pinter hit, "No Man's Land," because he'd still have to pay the virtually confiscatory British taxes — unless he stays out of Britain a full year, and, "I don't want to be out of England for a year

QUARTERING TROOPS IN NEW YORK CITY

by Dr. Francis G. Valett

Worcester State College

c. 1975 American Antiquarian Society

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

In their jubilant celebration of the repeal of the Stamp Act in the spring of 1766, the New York Sons of Liberty crowded into the taverns to drink toasts and to compliment themselves on their success. Swarming out into the streets, the mob — warmed by rum and patriotism — amused themselves in the "throwing of Squibbs, Crackers, firing of muskets and pistols, breaking some windows and forcing off the Knockers off the Doors." The Liberty Pole, a symbol of defiance to British policy, was the center of these frolics.

Hardly noticed in the tumult over the Stamp Act (and in the joy at the time of its repeal) was the Quartering, or Mutiny, Act passed by Parliament in 1765. This law required colonial assemblies to provide barracks for British troops stationed in America; soldiers might be billeted in inns, alehouses and unoccupied dwellings. Colonies were also expected to supply the redcoats with such provisions as fuel, candles, vinegar, salt, small beer, and cider.

When General Thomas Gage, commander-in-chief of British forces in America, requested barracks and provisions for his men in 1766 colonial fears mounted. Some, thinking that their homes might be turned into barracks, angrily denounced the law. One excited journalist declared that the British would expose "the Chastity of our Wives and Daughters . . . to the Arrogance of a rude and unpolished Soldiery." Numerous condemnations of the law appeared in the newspapers.

Tensions mounted in the spring and summer of 1766, and some scuffles between the Liberty Boys and the soldiers occurred. In July the assembly (split by several contending factions) voted to provide some barracks and provisions in partial compliance with the Quartering Act. But this did not satisfy General Gage and other authorities. On the other hand, townspeople — prodded by radical leaders like Isaac Sears and John Lamb — became increasingly apprehensive.

With feelings running high in New York, a group of redcoats from the 28th regiment taunted the Patriots by cutting down the Liberty Pole. When a crowd gathered the next evening (August 11, 1766) to raise another pole, fighting broke out as the soldiers roughly dispersed the crowd. Liberty Boys wielding brickbats and clubs had to back off in the face of British bayonets.

In this incident several townspeople were wounded. One of them was a ringleader of the radicals, Isaac Sears, who had made a

RECRUITS.

Securing soldiers to serve in the British army in America during the Revolution was a constant problem. Service in the colonies was never a pleasant prospect for many Englishmen, and as time went by it was increasingly difficult to obtain recruits. In this English print, dated a few years before the war, a recruiting officer and sergeant appear to be persuading some nondescript men to leave the temptations of a grog shop for service in His Majesty's forces. Much of the opposition to the Quartering Act was rooted in the colonists' deep distrust of standing armies and their presence in their communities. One may gather from this gross caricature that the reputation of soldiers was not much higher even in their own land.

Whose known side of warfare is an undistinguished distinction of all ages, faces and conditions. A Prince, whose character is to raise money in America as the Sugar Act and Stamp Act had been, but, as Sam Adams wrote in the BOSTON GAZETTE, it would actually tax the colonists "as effectively as the Stamp Act." Quite obviously, the Patriots argued the Quartering Act was just as unconstitutional as the Stamp Act.

The wrangling over the measure continued in New York because Parliament looked upon the assembly's partial compliance with the act as an "open defiance" of the law. It was not until June, 1767, that the legislature (under the threat of dissolution) voted — with a majority of one — to provide £ 3000 for the use of the troops. Parliament, unaware of this, had voted to suspend the assembly's legislative powers effective October 1, 1767. The governor did not carry out the suspension, however, because of the provision bill that had been passed.

Quartering of soldiers in America during the preliminaries of the Revolution was a sore subject everywhere; New York was the center of dispute in 1766 and 1767, because it was the headquarters of the British where the largest number of troops were located. Troubles would erupt in other places, too.

The Quartering Act controversy in New York had raised several serious questions. Could Great Britain pass the cost of maintaining troops in America on to the colonists? Was this statute constitutional? Did Parliament have the authority to suspend a colonial assembly? These were ominous questions in those days of oratory and violence.

which have connected them with another, and to respect reputation as a privateer in the French and Indian War, and was now one of the lesser merchants of the town. Sears had considerable influence with New Yorkers — especially those living near the waterfront — partly because he had lived with sailors most of his life, and partly because he married the daughter of Jasper Drake, "who ran a popular alehouse for New York sailors and vagabonds."

The fired-up Patriots soon erected another Liberty Pole with the sign "George, Pitt and Liberty." And further incidents were avoided because General Gage ordered British troops not to patrol the streets or to engage in more fights with the townspeople. But the dispute over the Quartering Act was not over in New York, and larger questions than the erection of liberty poles were involved.

As the Sons of Liberty thought about this parliamentary act, they saw that it was in reality another way of taxing the colonists. The Quartering Act was not an integral part of prime minister George Grenville's plan to raise money in America as the Sugar Act and Stamp Act had been, but, as Sam Adams wrote in the BOSTON GAZETTE, it would actually tax the colonists "as effectively as the Stamp Act." Quite obviously, the Patriots argued the Quartering Act was just as unconstitutional as the Stamp Act.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Even if you are hesitating, make that business call you have in mind. Some useful information to be gleaned.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Venus somewhat adverse. YOU will have to make the overtures in solving a romantic dilemma — IF you think it's worth it.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — A meeting with an influential person can now be arranged, but it will be up to YOU to propose the time, date and place.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Make the most of certain unexpected situations. Your energy and good judgment will be more than sufficient to cope with them.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Where finances are concerned, try negotiating a slight modification which will make your present arrangement more profitable.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Your concentration should be working on all cylinders now. Bring to the surface those good ideas you have and put them in working order.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Independence of thought and action should be stressed, but don't arbitrarily reject unusual ideas. A different viewpoint could give your efforts new direction.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Avoid that far-out limb which has neither been tested for strength nor offers a good reason for examination. What fascinates is not always worth going after.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — A favorable day for routine affairs, but care needed in financial matters. Don't speculate or gamble in any way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Job matters are likely to conflict with personal desires, but accept the situation for the present. It will pay off later.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — An original twist or a new method could brighten routine, but don't go to extremes or attempt the bizarre.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — A pick-up, a brighter set of stimulating influences. Yet there goes with this (as with Aquarius) an admonition to avoid extremes, to curb your emotions.

YOU BORN TODAY are quite a serious individual, a deep thinker and scholarly in your inclinations. You should strive for an excellent education since, with it, you can achieve the lofty goals you set for yourself. You are never satisfied with the mediocre, so could never be happy in inferior positions in life. Properly trained, however, you could make a great success in literature, journalism, playwrighting, aviation or as a dealer in art objects.

Opening lead — three of clubs.

There is no doubt that some hands are much harder to play than others. For example, suppose you're in four hearts and West leads a club to the ace, whereupon East returns the seven of spades which you win with the ace.

If you tend to be a complacent declarer, you may wind up going down one. If you lead a trump at trick three, which seems to be the normal thing to do, West takes the ace and returns a low spade which East ruffs. Whatever East returns, you eventually fail because West still has a spade trick coming.

If you take the hand more seriously at the start, you make the contract. There is a strong possibility that East's spade return at trick two is a singleton, and you should try to cover that contingency.

Upon winning the spade, you should ruff a club in dummy, cash the A-K of diamonds, ruff a diamond, and only then at long last, lead a trump.

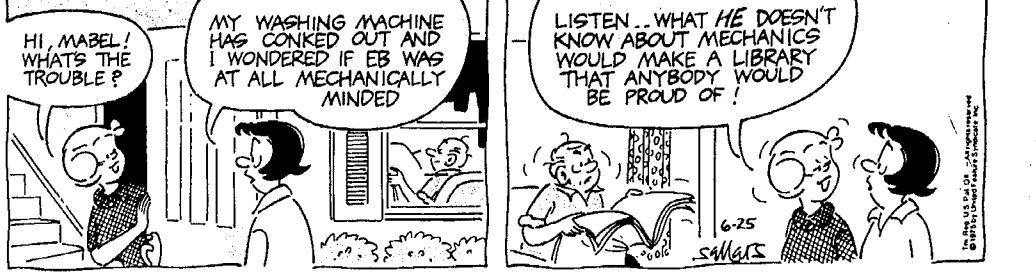

West will probably go up with the ace and give partner a spade ruff to bring his side its third trick, but the big difference is that East now has only clubs left and must lead one! This gives you a ruff and discard, and thus eliminates your remaining spade loser.

The hand demonstrates an important principle of dummy play. When the available clues indicate that the contract is in danger if declarer follows a particular course of play, it is wise for him to stop a moment to consider whether or not there is any way of protecting himself against that lurking danger.

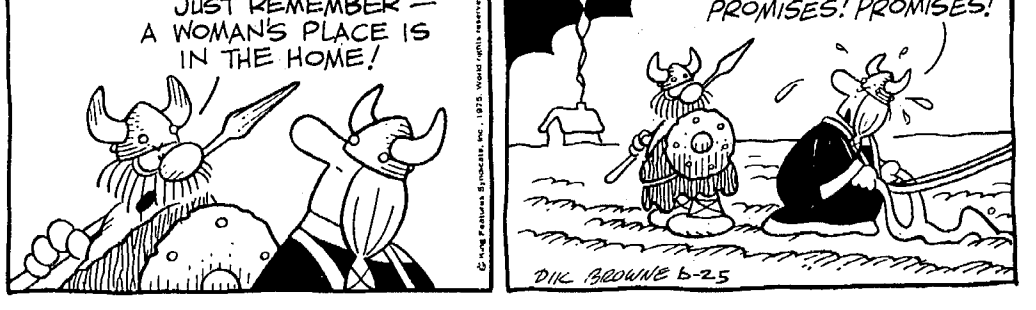

Those who play too fast occasionally fall down and go boom!

Drug laws abroad:

If you're touring a foreign country this summer, get set for some hard news.

No matter which way you go, you'll run smack into drug laws that are a whole lot tougher than ours.

You may have heard differently. You may have heard possession and sale of drugs overseas or south of our own border is okay. Or at least tolerated. That's a lie. Drugs are illegal. The same as here. And that's the truth.

Only one thing is different. The penalties are stiffer. In Lebanon, for instance, possession gets you 3 to 5 years in a mental hospital. That's the law. And there's no way around their law.

Drug arrests of Americans overseas have jumped 70% since last year. And nobody can help. Not friends. Or family. Or the smartest lawyer in town. Not the United States government.

That's why there are over 700 American citizens doing time on drug charges in foreign jails.

Those are the facts. And so are these: the drug laws and penalties of 15 foreign countries.

Which one will you be visiting?

Mexico. Possession, 2 to 9 years plus fine. Trafficking, 3 to 10 years plus fine. Illegal import or export of drugs, 6 to 15 years plus fine. Persons arrested on drug charges can expect a minimum of 6 to 12 months pre-trial confinement. U.S. Embassy: Cor. Danubio and Pasodclaraforma 305 Colonia Cuauhtemora Mexico City, Mexico Tel. 511-7991

Spain. Penalty depends on quantity of drugs involved. Less than 500 grams, fine and release on bail until trial. More than 500 grams, heavy fine plus minimum of 6 years in jail. U.S. Embassy: Serrano 75 Madrid, Spain Tel. 276-3400

Greece. Possession, minimum 2 years in jail. Trafficking, 5 to 20 years plus fine. U.S. Embassy: 91 Basilissis Sophia's Blvd. Athens, Greece Tel. 712951

Germany. Possession, 3 years. Law may be changed this summer demanding increased penalty. U.S. Embassy: Nehle Avenue 53 Bonn-Bad Godesberg Bonn, Germany Tel. 02229-1955

Japan. Sentences based on amount of drugs. Recent case involved 600 grams of hashish. Subject was sentenced to 2 years. Deportation follows. U.S. Embassy: 10-5 Akasaka 1-Chrome Minato-Ku, Tokyo Tel. 583-7141

Lebanon. Possession and use, 1 to 3 years in a mental hospital. Trafficking, 3 to 15 years. U.S. Embassy: Corniche at Rue Aiv Meisich, Beirut, Lebanon Tel. 240-800

Jamaica. Possession, minimum of 18 months. U.S. Embassy: 43 Duke Street Kingston, Jamaica Tel. 26341

Jesus's role in curing addicts studied

REHRERSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Federal dollars are funding an evaluation of the role of Jesus Christ in curing drug and alcohol addicts at a 200-acre farm here in the lush Pennsylvania Dutch farm country.

A $250,000 Health, Education and Welfare grant has underwritten the first two years of a planned seven-year study of 300 1968 youth graduates and dropouts at Teen Challenge centers in Brooklyn, N. Y., and on this dairy farm 40 miles east of Harrisburg.

"We believe this is the first religious therapeutic community to open its records to federal evaluation of its rate of success in reclaiming the lives of drug and alcohol abusers," Steven Tuttle, a Teen Challenge research executive said.

Though first evaluation of interview data now being collected on Rehersburg's revisited class of '68 won't begin until next year, Teen Challenge official Jack Schell said early reports hint the Christ-oriented program's claim of 70 per cent cures may prove even higher.

"The role of Jesus Christ in showing students more love, closeness, human warmth and concern is the factor missing from most drug and alcohol programs," Schell said.

"That's a 24-hour, seven days a week factor here."

Teen Challenge Training Center near Rehersburg has a current daily average of 125 students. It is one of three United States centers offering eight-months' concern, work, education and vocational training for youth recruited by 50 Teen Challenge induction centers in the U. S., Canada, Europe, Puerto Rico and Australia.

The total Teen Challenge program, begun 14 years ago by the Rev. David Wilkerson, a former Philipsburg, Pa., minister, now involves an average resident population of 1,000, and an average 14,000 counseling contacts each week.

Over the years the name Teen Challenge has become a slight misnomer. The average student age at Rehersburg now is 22-23.

The Chicago firm contracted to locate, question and evaluate the class of 1968, National Opinion Research Center, developed an exhaustive questionnaire and thus far has located 70 per cent of the Rehersburg graduates, 45 per cent of its dropouts and 27 per cent of the Brooklyn induction center dropouts.

An NOPC interview with one Rehersburg dropout — no name is included — showed that soon after leaving the farm he resumed use of hallucinogens, methadone and heroin. But he quickly turned to a Teen Challenge affiliate for further help and now has abstained from drugs for four years.

An interview with a 1968 Rehersburg graduate, a heroin addict at nine, showed a record of "five years' total abstinence from drugs, completion of his last three years of high school and current employment as a salaried counselor.

"His only drug use now is vitamins," the interview recorded.

While most governmental programs now aim for the substitution of less harmful drugs for the opiate derivatives, Teen Challenge aims for total abstinence from drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

A 1973 study by two nationally-recognized drug experts, Drs. Carl Chambers and Leon Brill of the University of Miami, showed the national average retention rate for drug addicts in drug substitution programs was only 50 per cent.

One hundred Holstein dairy cows, an auto body shop, print shop and acres of vegetables offer the work therapy element at Rehersburg, and everyone must work.

"Sometimes the results can be very funny," Schell said. "One boy who had never seen a cow was asked to wash her before putting her on the milking machine. He started not on her udder but her face."

The focal points of Rehersburg farm are chapel and classroom.

"The basic approach at Teen Challenge," its officials vow, "is that there is hope; that the root problem is sin, not drugs or alcohol, and that the only cure for sin is Jesus Christ."

"Students arrive with an ambivalent feeling of 'I want to get off drugs, but I don't want to,' and it's crucial to have an overwhelming awareness that 'I can't make it on my own,'" Schell said.

One current student, Santos, 40, was a daily heroin user facing loss of his wife and three children before he came to Rehersburg five months ago.

"With the help of other Christians, I've finally found myself," he said. "Anytime one of us makes a mistake here, we work together to help each other, and it works. When I rejoin my family, I'll be a new man."

Mark, 20, a five-year drug and alcohol user from upstate New York, almost bolted the day he arrived.

"I walked off the bus into the chapel and saw all those Puerto Rican and black guys, and I was ready to go. But I walked around outside a while, went back inside the chapel, and after three days I realized I wanted to stay, that I wanted help."

WHY
CHIROPRACTIC
X-RAYS?

The x-ray films taken by the Chiropractor serve the purpose of revealing the exact alignment or misalignment of the spinal bones (called vertebrae) showing as well any distortion in the relationship between other various parts of the skeleton. This necessary information is in order to determine which vertebrae are out of their normal position sitting incorrectly upon their cartilaginous disk and thereby producing nerve pressure on spinal nerves that emit between the vertebrae.

Without the help of the x-ray film, the Chiropractor would be greatly hindered in his ability to pinpoint the area of involvement in the spine. It is not hard to understand that such "hit or miss" procedures could not possibly contribute to or help maintain a scientific and accurate method of correcting spinal nerve pressure.

They also show abnormalities and certain pathologies in the spinal column.

Viet refugees gladden heart of any educator

FT. INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (UPI) — The veteran educator said his classes would be the envy of any Pennsylvania teacher.

Students rise when he enters the classroom and again as he leaves.

Class attention is riveted on the teacher or a responding student, with pin-drop silence in between.

Vandalism does not exist and no student ever interrupts.

Though sometimes 90 students crowd into a classroom with only 30 chairs and no desks, they find class periods of an hour and a half too short.

"Their eagerness to learn is incredible. They believe their very survival depends on it, and since I began teaching, I've never known students with quicker grasp."

The teacher is Dr. Neal Musmanno, Pittsburg, who was deputy secretary of education for 12 years until his resignation last year to make an unsuccessful bid for the Pennsylvania Senate.

His students are Vietnamese refugees — lawyers, children, architects, fishermen, businessmen, farmers, engineers, teachers and former soldiers of South Vietnam.

"Classes include whole families — from children and their parents to grandparents — and that may be a significant control factor," Musmanno said.

Musmanno, who also teaches at the University of Pittsburgh, was one of the first of some 100 volunteers who began teaching English to the Vietnamese at this sprawling military base three weeks ago.

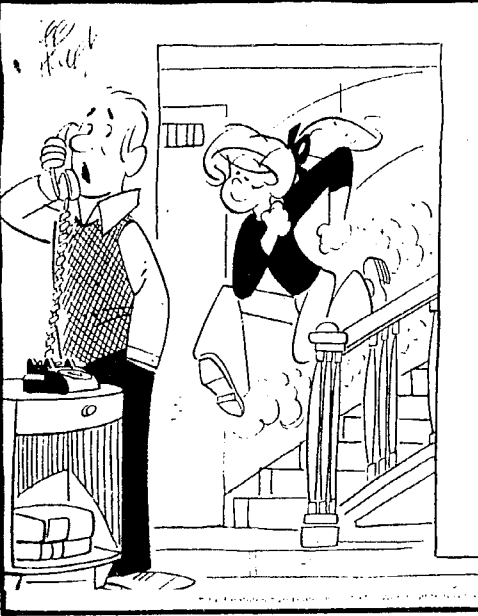

"It's survival English aimed at helping them arrange to shop for groceries, find shelter, clothing, security and communicate with the rest of us."

"Most older Vietnamese are bilingual in Vietnamese and French, with some of the younger people bilingual in Vietnamese and GI English. Profanity, unless it's GI, is not part of their vocabulary. The peak of something like profanity might be a wish that a dog die on your land," Musmanno said.

"They reflect a culture 1,000 years old, and their gentleness and understanding is heightened by a fear of not being wanted or of imposing on Americans. They don't want to go on welfare."

Musmanno praised the Pennsylvania State Education Association for urging each of its 475 locals to sponsor a Vietnamese family.
